Poetry.

IN MEMORIAM OF LUCY GLOVER.

Sweet flower of promise,

Just beginning to bloom,—

Torn from thy parents,

And laid in the tomb.

The bright Summer has passed,

Sweet Autumn has come;

And thou art transplanted

To a heavenly home.

There no chilling winds,

Nor cold driving storms,

Nor keen biting frosts,

Can blight thy fair form:

But in Eden's fair bowers

Thy leaves shall unfold,

And the glories thou'lt find,

Can never be told.

Thou canst call the sweet flowers

With thy tiny hands,

And weave them in garlands

For thy spirit land:

To place round the heads

Of parents so dear;

And one thy brothers,

Who will miss thee so here.

Thy sweet smiling face,

Is hid from our sight,—

But in Heaven it beams

With a radiance bright.

Soon Winter will come,

The flowers will decay;

But thou wilt be blooming

In Heaven,—always.

Thy little freed spirit

Will oft soar to earth,

To see those dear parents

That gave thee thy birth.

And when the pale boatmen

Crosses over for them,

You will stand on the shore,

And in love you'll extend

The hand of affection,—

Bestow the warm kiss,

And welcome them gladly

To your sweet home of bliss. H. C. W.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1867.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

RECEPTION OF GENERAL SHERIDAN.

The following is the programme for the reception of General Sheridan, in Boston, on Monday next, as arranged by the City Committee:

The General is expected to arrive by the morning express train from Newport over the Old Colony and Newport Railway, and will be received privately by the committee at the Savin Hill Station, Dorchester. The party will then proceed by the most direct route through Dorchester and Roxbury, to the Neck, where they will arrive precisely at 11 o'clock A. M., and be received by the Mayor and other officials, State and National, with a volunteer escort, consisting of the First and Second Brigades, M. V. M., entire, including the cavalry. Adjutant General Cunningham will be chief marshal of the procession.

After the General has reviewed the troops, the line of march will be through Washington, Boylston, Arlington, Beacon Park, Winter and Summer streets, to Winthrop square, thence through Devonshire, Franklin, Washington, State, Commercial and South Market streets, to Dock square; Brattle and Court streets to Bowdoin square, completing the route probably at 4 o'clock P. M. The General and his suite will stop at the Revere House. From the hour of arrival at the hotel until 6 o'clock the time will be occupied at dinner.

The city government and other officials will be present to the city's guest from 6 until 7 1/2 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock arrangements have been made for a grand parade by the most prominent of the city lands united, at the conclusion of which General Sheridan will be presented to the citizens from the balcony of the Revere.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION. The Democrats of this State held their annual convention at Worcester on Tuesday, and nominated the following State ticket:—For Governor, John Quincy Adams, of Quincy; Lieut. Governor, Geo. M. Stevens, of Chicopee; Secretary, Charles Brimblecom, of Barre; Treasurer, Harvey Arnold, of Adams; Auditor, Arthur F. Devereux, of Roxbury; Attorney General, Wm. C. Eastcott, of Salem. A series of resolutions was adopted, and a State Committee appointed.

BEAUTIFUL PIECE OF WORKMANSHIP. There can be seen in the window of Mr. Holden's jewelry store, a very beautiful and costly case, made from twenty or more rich pieces of wood handsomely carved and ingeniously put together. It is the work of an aged seaman at the new National Sailors' Home in this town.

WE learn that George Crane, has purchased of his brother, Charles Crane, the old and favorite private stand in the Square; and he is in hopes to be able to carry it on in a manner that shall be attractive to the public and profitable to himself.

REAL ESTATE SALE. Mr. John Briesler has purchased of Mr. Henry H. Faxon a small triangular piece of land adjoining his beautiful estate on Hancock street, for six hundred dollars. We learn that he has bought this land mainly to get rid of a small, inferior, meanly looking shop which has recently been moved partly in front of his residence.

THE EQUINOXIAL. Sunday was a perfect day—lovely in its mildness and brightness as May or June—with a calm beauty in the atmosphere that has comparison with no other time in the year. About midnight, however, the scene changed; the clouds gathered thickly, the wind shifted and blew fiercely, from the northeast, and soon the rain began to fall. Monday was cold, wet and disagreeable. Towards night the rain ceased, and the clouds broke away, with the wind fresh and cold from the north. The storm, though brief, must pass for the "line storm," as we have had no other for several weeks.

AUCTION. We would call the attention of our readers to the sale of furniture, horse, hogs, &c., at one o'clock this afternoon at the residence of Capt. Elwell, on Main street. For particulars see advertisement in another column.

OPENING LECTURE. It will be seen by our Special Notice column that Judge Edmonds, of New York, will deliver the opening lecture before the Spiritists at Music Hall, Boston, to-morrow afternoon. W. Eugene Thayer, plays on the big organ half an hour previous to the lecture.

ELECTIONS. There are elections in four States on Tuesday next, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa.

WE understand that E. E. Williamson, of this town, is ready to deliver his Lecture on "CROMWELL," before Lyceums and Literary Associations.

Gen. Tom Thumb and family, who now reside in Middleboro' were at the Bridgewater Fair and were of course a spectacle as well as spectators.

SHARPERS ABOUT. Twenty-two thousand dollars worth of United States bonds were adversely abstracted from the cashier's desk of the First National Bank at Providence, (R. I.) on Tuesday last.

Mr. Jas. M. Dean, who for the past fourteen years has filled the office of foreman in the composing room of the Boston Cultivator, died at his residence in South Braintree on Sunday last, of consumption, aged about 40 years. He leaves a wife and three children.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, OCT. 3d, 1867.

The signs of the times nebulous.—Groundless fears of anarchy.—The Union invulnerable.—General Sheridan.—Worcester Convention.—Locals.

The horoscope for October gives anything but bright auguries. The past is secure; the future in the history of our country uncertain. The public debt is not diminishing. A combination of great power is said to exist against the entire National Bank system. But with the present condition of the country, the Federal banking scheme is indispensable. We cannot do without it. If modifications are necessary, it is in the power of Congress to make such changes as will increase public confidence in their (the banks) utility. It is already known, that the Treasurer will suggest certain improvements in the banking system at the opening of Congress. There are occasional failures of the National banks. This is not owing so much to the system as the dishonesty of the officials of these banks; and, therefore, no argument against their true applicability to business; as conducted legally, they fully meet the expectations of the business community. Every dollar of their circulation is pledged by the Federal government; so that whatever may be the distractions of the banks, all bill holders are safe.

The aspects of trade and enterprise are darkened by the sensational stories that often reach us from Washington. The latest to my time of writing, that an introduction of a resolution to suspend President Johnson on the meeting of Congress next month, and the attempt to pass it, would be viewed by him as a cassus belli, a revolutionary act, and he would immediately issue a proclamation, representing that an attempt was about to be made to depose him unlawfully; he would then declare the two Houses adjourned, and call on the army and navy to support him. And further it is rumored, should the President proceed Congress before the passage of a resolution of suspension Gen. Grant will then probably as a soldier feel himself bound to obey the orders of Johnson. But here comes the climax of sensation. Should Congress succeed in passing a resolution of suspension, and elect Senator Wade President ad interim, then Grant will look to Wade for directions, and become the servant of Congress. And thus we should pass the ordeal of another revolution. The heart of every true patriot at whatever party he belongs, sickens at such reflections. Many take a more hopeful view, and believe there will be no outbreak at the meeting of Congress—that the action of the National Legislature and the President will be such, that the great foundations of our government will not be disturbed. And yet there are causes for solicitude. The President in a public speech has intimated that the moment is perilous; and it is well known that General Grant has his misgivings. Ours is a government of popular sovereignty, invested in the hands of a few but the many. When the rebellion of 1861 broke out, party lines were in a great measure merged into one glorious association—the union party. The rank and file of the adherents of Stephen A. Douglas flocked under its standard. Let the tress of civil war be sounded at Washington, and the President would find himself without a party. The slight hold that he has on the Democrats would be loosened. Our institutions of civil government, (and the best on earth) established by our Fathers are as dear to American hearts as their lives. The course of the President at this crisis may be dangerous, but it is danger without power. The people are the government inherently, and they will take care that the Union shall be preserved and its blessings handed to their posterity. Eato periphrast.

Gen. Sheridan is expected on Monday next. It is needless to say that he will have a grand and enthusiastic reception by Bostonians. He deserves it. The State Democratic Convention was held in Worcester on Tuesday last. Your respected townsman, John Quincy Adams Esq., received the nomination for Governor.

The pleasant weather of the season causes a large influx of visitors here daily. Our great thoroughfares of business have a lively appearance at business hours. The retail trade has been quite encouraging since my last.

NOTICE. The attention of our readers is called to the business card of E. Granville Pratt, to correct an erroneous impression somewhat prevalent in this town, that he has relinquished the practice of law, in Quincy, and solicits only Boston business. We are authorized to say that he still continues in the practice among us, at his new office, at his dwelling-house, on Hancock Street. Grateful for your generous patronage in the past, he still hopes by strict attention to business, and his greatly increased facilities for attending to your orders with promptness, to deserve your continued patronage. Office open throughout the day and evening.

THE LITTLE CORONAL for October presents a beautiful table of contents, always original, and always popular, pure and elevating. Now is the best time to subscribe for this attractive juvenile, as the publisher offers to send the November and December numbers of this year free to new subscribers for 1868 that are sent before the last day of October. Great inducements are offered to those who raise clubs.

For the Patriot.
THE NOMINATION.

The Democratic Convention at Worcester, last Tuesday, nominated our esteemed citizen, John Quincy Adams, Esq., for Governor. This is a high compliment to so young a man, done as it was in the face of confident assertions that he would not accept the nomination.

The selection is all the more flattering to Mr. Adams, as it cannot be considered in any sense a party nomination. The delegates had been chosen at caucuses called for Democrats, Conservatives, and all others opposed to the present State policy; and included many who have heretofore acted with the present dominant party.

In the position in which our townsman is now placed, we cannot forbear to express a hope that he will accept the nomination thus confidently tendered to him; it is not the first time in the history of our country, that when occasions have called for men who dared to throw aside party shackles, this town and this same family have been looked to, and never been looked to in vain. HANCOCK.

Senatorial, Councillor and Representative DISTRICTS.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

As we are in the midst of a political canvass, it may be of advantage and interest, to state in your columns the various Districts in which Quincy is situated, and a list of the towns with which we are to act in local political affairs.

The following is a correct statement:

Second Norfolk Senatorial District.—Canton, Dedham, Dorchester, Dover, Milton, Needham, Quincy. Seven towns.—6094 legal voters.

Second Councillor District.—(Each District consists of five Senatorial Districts) comprises the 2d Plymouth, 1st Bristol, Norfolk and Plymouth, 2d Norfolk and 3d Norfolk Senatorial Districts.

The 2d Plymouth District comprises the following towns: Abington, Bridgewater, E. Bridgewater, Halifax, Hanson, North Bridgewater, Pembroke, and W. Bridgewater. 5878 legal voters.

The 1st Bristol District: Attleborough, Easton, Mansfield, Norton, Raynham, and Taunton. 6053 legal voters.

The Norfolk and Plymouth District: Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate, S. Scituate, Braintree and Weymouth. 5904 legal voters.

Total number of voters in 2d Councillor District, 30,018.

3d Norfolk Representative District comprises the town of Quincy, in which there are twelve hundred and seventy-six legal voters, according to the last decennial census, taken in 1865. No Representative to the National Congress is to be elected this Fall. The following is a list of the towns in the Second Congressional District.

For the Patriot.

THE STREET LIGHTS.

A little attention on the part of our Selectmen to the very unsatisfactory manner in which our street lights are taken care of and lighted would gratify numerous citizens.

When lights are shut off at ten, P. M., instead of eleven,—when they are not lighted at all because there happens to be a small piece of a moon visible for a half hour or more in the early part of the evening, and the lanterns become so dirty as to resemble ground glass, we think it time attention was given to the matter, and some one was employed who will faithfully carry out the instructions.

If the party who at present has them in charge cannot do it, let the Selectmen employ some one who will.

J.

PHRENOLOGY. Mr. S. E. Asten, of Dorchester, Mass., is now making a lecturing tour through our State. He is an able phrenologist, a graduate of the class of Fowler & Wells. Mr. Asten has lectured nearly fifty times in Maine and Massachusetts, and his lectures have given entire satisfaction. There is an accuracy and exactness about his examinations which renders them truly scientific. —Winthrop Gazette, Feb. 2d, '67.

We cheerfully endorse the above and would say we believe Mr. Asten's examinations are frank, thorough, and truthful. —Cambridge Press.

Mr. Asten's examinations have given general satisfaction. It gives us pleasure to add our testimony to the many complimentary notices he has received from the press, professional men and others. We sincerely commend him to all who desire plain, straight-forward examinations, without nonsense or flattery.

The President has done a good thing, for which he should have credit, in refusing a pardon to that notorious villain, Dr. Blackburn, who tried to introduce yellow fever into the North through the medium of clothing taken from persons who had died of the disease. Mr. Seward informs the scamp that he is charged with felony and not rebellion, and does not come under the rules that apply to rebels generally.

For the Patriot.
TEA-TOTALISM.

In the last number of the New England Medical Gazette there is an article upon the abuse of tea by Dr. Conrad Wesselhoef, a physician whose science and insight are held in the highest respect by many very intelligent persons. He declares his convictions "that the abuse of tea in our community is as great as that of ardent spirits, and that its effect are equally pernicious." Other eminent physicians have held very similar views. Of course nobody pretends that the abuse of tea is so easily recognized as a public nuisance as is the abuse of whiskey. But it is gravely argued by responsible men, that our over-indulgence in tea as decidedly affects the well-being of the community, and as surely impairs the physical condition of the succeeding generation. What shall those of us do who accept these views? The answer is of course plain. Form a secret league, and pass laws making it a criminal offence to take a single cup of that refreshing beverage. Let us seize all the tea we can find on the shelves of the grocers, and arrest the expressman who is carrying a small package of that herb to a picnic of Good Templars.

But before we act so hastily, let us consider another statement which Dr. Wesselhoef makes in this same article, and in which he is sustained by a great majority of the eminent physicians of the world. "Tea, coffee, spices of all kinds, alcoholic beverages, especially wine and beer, as well as tobacco, are within certain limits, essential to the welfare of mankind. Their abuse does not in the slightest degree disprove their usefulness and necessity."

A. and B. are two lawyers who have an important case in court. As they return to their hotel at the close of the first day the following dialogue takes place:

A. "Well, I'm tired out, and there's a prospect of a worse day to-morrow. I must have something to refresh me. I shall order a good pot of tea, hot and strong, and a Washington pie,—what do you say?"

B. "Why, what I say is, that if I should take a cup of tea I should not sleep to-night, and should be nervous and irritable all to-morrow. You have no conception of the evil influence of this stimulant of strong tea to which you have accustomed yourself. Study its effects upon one unused to it, and see what a high degree of excitement it produces, what a violent wrench it gives the entire nervous system. You would do better to follow my custom, and take nothing but a biscuit and a glass of ale at the close of a fatiguing day. But of course you must be guided by your own experience,—I have no right to dictate to you."

A. "Yes, but I claim the right to dictate to you. For I found it for my political interest to have a law passed, making the sale of the particular stimulant that agrees with you a criminal offence. So you must either refresh yourself upon your favorite stimulant, tea, and experience all the evils that you say come from it, or confine yourself to the pump."

B. "Well, really, my brother, this is rather hard doctrine. There is a certain rule of logic in persons who eschew all stimulants, and would compel their neighbors to do likewise. But for you who claim the right to pucker your stomach and irritate your nerves with strong tea, to undertake to deprive me of the far less objectionable stimulant of a glass of ale, is—well, I will not give it the name it deserves, as I do not wish to reflect too harshly upon some well meaning people. But it is a poor law that would require you to abstain from tea, and be a hurtful stimulant, and denies me what I know to be innocent and advantageous. Mutato nomine de tea fabula narratur.

ANOTHER BANK DEFAUCATION. The New Haven Journal says it was discovered on Monday morning last, that the cashier of the Litchfield County Bank, at New Milford, had departed for Canada, after having surrendered his assets. He is found to be a defaulter to the amount of between $50,000 and $75,000, which he has used out of the funds of the bank and lost in stock speculation. The cashier's name is Konklin. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and a man much respected and trusted in the community. He was not a fast man, but he was in unfortunate speculations. Before leaving for Canada he gave up his entire assets to the bank.

MAP OF BOSTON AND VICINITY. E. P. Dutton & Co., 135 Washington street, Boston, have recently published a beautiful and valuable colored map of Boston and the country adjacent, from actual surveys. It contains all the towns and villages within the radius of twenty to twenty-five miles of Boston. Also, the railroads, streets, rivers, mountains, islands, &c. &c. It shows the distance of each town and village from Boston and much other useful information. It is published at the low price of one dollar, and we think that no one in the vicinity of Boston, after once carefully examining this map, would be without it, if it cost five times its present price.

PREMIUMS. We have often wondered why the makers of the celebrated ESTEY COTTAGE ORGANS have not advertised to the people their different prizes of which they have received over fifty. For instance, a gold medal was awarded them last year by the New York State Fair, and a first premium by the New England Agricultural Society; and at the recent exhibition of the Vermont State Fair, where there was a large display from the most noted makers in the United States, who contested the ground severely, the Estey Organs came off victorious, receiving the highest premiums in the award of the Society.

Summary Intelligence.

FIRE. No less than six alarms were given in Boston between midnight and five o'clock on Tuesday morning last. Loss upwards of $300,000.

The Fall River News says there is in that city a negro boy of about eighteen years of age who is turning white. His hands have become as white as the purest Caucasian, and the greater portion of his face and neck are undergoing the same transformation, making him present a sort of piebald appearance.

The maples and beeches in the country are already getting on their fall costumes of gold and crimson. No trees so beautiful in the world as American trees in autumn.

The Internal Revenue receipts last week were $186,000. Amount of duties received at Boston on imports for the week ending the 16th, were $452,000.

Five hundred thousand dollars in fractional currency were issued last week, $100,000 of which were sent to Boston.

BREAD AND BUTTER.

At the Worcester County Fair the Committee on bread and butter incorporated into their report the following lines:

The girl engaged in moulding bread,
Shall make some sweetest flatter,
With hopes to get that dairy maid
To make his bread and butter.

She may not play the game croquet,
Or French and German stouter,
It will show the curd from whey,
And make sweet bread and butter.

In meal or cream she'll ebb and flow,
And cannot stop to pouter;
But says it will show and reap,
She'll make his bread and butter.

The dairy maid, the farmer's wife,
Shall be the toast we utter;
Alone, man leads a crusty life,
Without good bread and butter.

Farmers' Department.

OCTOBER ON THE FARM.

This again is a busy month on the farm. The harvest is in full progress, and that will necessarily occupy a good deal of time, and in addition to this, a great variety of work suggests itself. The corn should be pushed ahead with vigor. On many farms the corn will be found to be choked up, or partly filled by neglect and the rank summer growth along their margins. These should be carefully cleaned out, and the rich collections of mud thrown up and spread upon the grass.

Now is the time also to redouble your labor of drawing muck and litter of every kind to the barnyard. The proper management of manure heaps, of course, involves constant care, and makes a special labor throughout the year. It requires more or less daily attention, at almost all seasons, and if a farmer expects to succeed he must give it constant thought, a very frequent addition of muck or loam, or leaves, or plaster, and a forking over, sometimes to hasten fermentation, at others to prevent its too rapid progress. No farmer can be eminently successful who neglects the manure heap. It is the beginning, and the middle, and the end of all good farming, and we are more and more astonished every day, as we look about the country, to see this vital department of the farm, the management of manures, so much neglected.

But this especially, and the following weeks till the ground freezes up, should be largely devoted to the barn yard. Haul leaves from the road sides and the woods, and mulch the ponds, wherever it is accessible, and dump into the yard, no matter how deep. If your farm consists of a light soil, and clay is accessible without too much labor, it will pay well to have a mixture of that in the yard.

Some farmers haul out their manure and build it up into large heaps upon the fields, or on land they intend to plow up in the spring. If the manure consists of a great variety of substances taken from the cow and the horse stalls, the pig-pen and other places, and needs composting, and if the land is sloping, and liable to wash we do not particularly object to this method, though it involves a vast deal of work. If the manure is tolerably uniform and well made, and the land level, we should save the labor by carting out, and spreading directly upon the surface.

But where the practice of heaping in large piles is adopted, it should be remembered that the heaps ought not to be too narrow, nor very high, and if they are firmly trodden down by carting upon them, so as to pack them uniformly, after being properly mixed, so much the better. While making up the heap, a few coatings of plaster of Paris may be added to advantage, and when finished up, a liberal sprinkling over the top will be good economy. The whole should then be covered over with muck or loam. The operation is simple enough, as all the management of manure is; but where farmers fail, is in not giving a little attention often, every day, or every two or three days at most, with some regular system of protection or accumulation. If a farmer gives his thought to this subject, and begins to make a special study of the manufacture of manure and fertilizing substances, he will be astonished to see how much can be done to advantage and profit, that had not occurred to him before. It is absurd and ridiculous for a farmer to be pinching and parsimonious in little comforts for his family or for himself, if he is wasteful and uneconomical in the management of manures. It is like saving at the spigot, and neglecting at the bung-hole.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

"It is a painful thing," said Jones, who had been deceived, to have pretended friends, and to find them out."

"Yes," said Brown, "but that can happen seldom. The plague of life is, that you are always liable to find them at home."

The London Fun has a hit at tight trousers. Jones has been telling Robinson one of his stories:

Robinson—"Y'as; it's very funny!"

Jones—"Then why the deuce don't you laugh?"

Robinson—"My dear fellow, I would with pleasure, but I daren't display any emotion—these trousers are so tremendously tight!"

"I am a great gun," said a tipsy printer, who had been on a spree for a week.

"Yes," said the foreman; "you are a great gun, and half cocked, and you can consider yourself discharged."

"Well," said the type, "then I better go off."

SUMPTUARY LAWS.
To the Publisher of the Patriot.
In looking over an old file of the Patriot, I found the enclosed lines. They were addressed to some of our legislators who were then endeavoring to force upon us a sumptuary law, somewhat like the present prohibitory one, which is so revolting to the good sense of our community.
The initials will be recognized perhaps as those of one who was an early friend of the editor, and a frequent contributor to his paper in its infancy.

Dash to the ground the glass,
Friends surely should not pass,
From hand to hand, a spell,
That is to many a brave soul,
To many a better steel strong,
To many a free help to lend.

And pledge too, if you will, to each
To touch not, taste not, and to teach
Your children to refrain
From the alluring sparkling cup,
So dangerous a thing,
Is everlasting pain.

And you should use your influence too,
And urge your neighbors to eschew
So dangerous a thing,
Show them it is an asp that charms,
Enchains and blinds them to alarms,
Then deals a deadly sting.

Further than this is losing ground—
Use force, and with the golden rod
Your names shall sound with just,
From curling lips, derision's smile
And pity musing all the while
For men whose high behests.

Lest we enslave us to the bowl,
Would make us slaves to their control
Boy like, who thought it best
To join the robbery band, and just,
For lose his fruit the poor man must
Without him by the rest.

What was it raised the Christian cross
O'er half the world's say, was it force
And gentleness severe?
The rack of gibbet, bolt and grate,
Or did the blinding lagoon's heat,
Aid its fair form to tear?

Ab, no! it was the acts and words
Of him who said they die by swords,
Who take the sword to kill;
Who blunder and blunder on,
Was called, then with pride may we Bare harsher titles still.

To free from slavery Africa's sons,
For Columbia's favored ones,
God speed that Heaven-born cause;
Yet small the choice would be, I ween,
The freeman and the slave between,
If you could make our laws.

You cannot turn the torrent's way,
Nor bid the flying comet stay,
Nor can you drive mankind;
Spare the wind his high career,
Spare, as it is that force breeds force,
You'll gather the whirlwind.

Not such as Nature's in her wrath,
Nor man's when passions point the path,
Of bullocks be the drivers;
Electric sparks are they to clear,
Of state the archangel's trumpet here,
And they'll fly far and fast. J. L. B.

Interesting Selections.
PEARS. Pare the fruit, leaving the stems on, and put into cold water. You may remove the core, or not, as you please. Make a syrup of a pound of sugar and half a pint of water to every pound of pears, and boil with some lemon-juice or green ginger. Put in the fruit and cook until clear and let the syrup remain over the fire until thick.

THE Tidout (Penn.) Journal tells a story of a dying man who requested a doctor to hold the night previous to his decease, in the building which he occupied, for the purpose of raising funds to pay for "a decent funeral." The receipts were $56. "Glory be to God" said the dying man, "now I'll have a decent burying, and the children can ride in a hack."

Amos Lawrence said, when asked for advice: "Young man, base all your actions upon a principle; preserve your integrity of character, and in doing this never reckon the cost."

Spodger came across a man the other day who is so conservative that he refuses to take a particular medicine, because it promises to work a radical cure.

"That's the opening of the ball," as the officer observed when a shell burst over head.

"Dad," replied Pat, "I'm thinking it's the breaking up of the ball."

Among the matrimonial advertisements lately noticed in a New York journal, was one for a husband having a Roman nose with strong religious tendencies.

Don't send for an adviser with the mere view of being confirmed in your own opinion. You might as well send for a doctor, and prescribe to him what medicine he ought to order.

FOR RHEUMATISM. Sarsaparilla root, sassafras chips, and gentian root, of each one ounce; gum guaiacum, half ounce; iodide of potassium, one-fourth ounce. Simmer the first four articles in a gallon of water to half a gallon; when nearly cold add the potassium; stir together, strain, bottle. Dose, wine-glass full twice a day.

TRIMPTATIONS. When a founder has cast his bell, he does not presently fix it in the steeple, but tries it with his hammer and hammers it on every side, to see if there be any flaw in it. Christ does not, presently after he has converted a man, convey him to heaven, but suffers him first to be beaten upon by many temptations, and then exhorts him to his crown.—Arrowsmith.

Miscellany.
GRANDPA'S BEGGAR BOY.
"Do but hear me, papa; do but have patience with me a few moments, while I tell you exactly how I found them." In a cellar, papa—a dark, gloomy, musty cellar in a narrow lane, where the sun never beams, where the birds never sing, where the flowers never bloom, where all is filthy; and he lay, yes, our darling Charlie lay upon a few bundles of damp straw, with only a thin sheet to cover him, and so pale, wan and emaciated—
"Mary, I command you to cease;" and the old man's voice fairly trembled with anger. "He made his own bed—let him lie in it!"

"But, papa, the veriest sinner in the world would gain pity did he suffer as now does your only son. And then his wife, so careless, yet so saintly, and his two sweet babes—"
"Harken to me, Mary," exclaimed Mr. Somers, in a vehement tone; "if you stop not this instant further pleading grow husky here—"that infuriated boy, that unfeeling son, that rebel to home; if you ever speak of him to me or any other friend, I'll cut you off with but one shilling. I will, ay, by all the saints in the calendar, I will! Go to your room before—" I curse you, too, he would have said, but she glided softly to his knee, nestled upon it as in olden time, wound her fair arms about his neck, and hushed his voice with kisses.

"Go, sis, you are but a foolish girl, after all, and mean well enough," said he, gently, as one and another sweet caress melted upon his lips and cheeks; "but as you love me, and as you value your inheritance, never again allude to this subject. I interdict it henceforth and forever." And the old man gently touched her pale forehead with his lips, and gazing a moment in her dark blue eyes, brimful of tears, he turned abruptly from her, put on his overcoat, gloves and hat, and took up his gold-headed cane, and walked away.

It was a bright, beautiful winter's morning. A slight snow had fallen the night before, and now every dipper sparkled like a marble terrace, while the streets and by-ways seemed lined with swan's down, so feathery were the pure drifting flakes that had whitened their dark lines. It was early and but few were abroad. Mr. Somers's footsteps were the first that imprinted themselves on the yielding snow, and child-like, he pleased himself with marking how straight was the path he made, and how regular the fall of his foot. But the long avenue was paced at length, and then he came to a crowded thoroughfare, and was jostled about as all the rest. He went to the market, the grocery, and coal yard, for the wants of his household reached to all three that morning, and then turned his steps once more towards his home. The walks were not yet swept, and as he again traversed the noble street, at whose further end stood his princely home, he saw with pleasure his own footprints yet fresh in the snow, and carefully followed the track. He had walked half the distance, when a slight hoarse cough arrested his attention. The sound came from behind him, and looking back, he saw a little boy four or five years old, only a few yards distant, and was amused to see the efforts he made to follow in his own broad steps. "Now I go up now I go down," he would say to himself, as he raised and let fall his tiny feet, and then, when they dropped into the right place, he would clap his little red hands and shout a loud hurrah. But in the midst of his glee, his foot slipped and down he went. But he lay only a moment, and then was gently raised by Mr. Somers, who exclaimed as he held him to his arms, "now you are up."

"Yes sir, and now I am down," and he slid from his arms and stood proudly alone. "I didn't hurt me sir," he said, "and you are a brave boy not to cry over a fall like that. Who are you, and where do you live?"

"O, I am a little beggar now and I live in a little cellar too. Please sir did you ever beg, and will you tell me how? cause mother sent me out to beg breakfast for us all, and I don't know what to say, only that I am very hungry and so is little sis, and poor mother, and sick father, too. Are people good to little beggars, sir?"

There was a naïveté about the little one so earnest and so true, that it melted the old man's heart entirely, and too full of tears to speak, he only took the child's hand in his own and led him to his own warm breakfast room. Softly did Harrie, for such he told them was his name, softly did he nestle in the velvet chair that was drawn close to the glowing grate, and with wondering eyes did he look about him, while Mr. Somers and the maid rubbed his red palms and feet. "And now that you are warmed, young Harrie, what would you like to eat?"

"Buckwheat cakes and honey, sir—I used to love them dearly, and we used to have them, before papa grew sick and poor," and it did the old man's heart good to see the little beggar eat.

"Why, you were half-starved," said he. "O, yes, we were half-starved for a week, but mother couldn't bear to own that we were beggars till to-day. Please, sir, you've got so much to eat, won't you let me bring her and little sister to get their breakfast, and give us some for father. He's so sick to walk so far."

"Ay," said the boy, "that will I fix us a basket Susan, and bid Thomas bring the carriage. I am too tired to walk again. How would you like a ride my little fellow?"

"A ride, and will you be so good?—O, I should love it dearly, and you'll take mother and little sister along, and father too, won't you, cause he's so sick?" And the tears stood in his pleading eyes.

"Ay, ay. And, little fellow, let me tell you, you know how to beg, as do but few, for your words drop clean into the heart. You are a wondrous little beggar boy."

"And do I know how to beg? O, I'm so glad, sir, cause now I'll keep them all in victuals every day, and maybe some-body will give me wood and coal, cause it's so cold to be without a fire."

"Now we will ride," said Mr. Somers, "and you'll take your mother and father too, won't you, cause he's so sick?" And the tears stood in his pleading eyes.

"Ay, ay. And, little fellow, let me tell you, you know how to beg, as do but few, for your words drop clean into the heart. You are a wondrous little beggar boy."

"One of your front teeth is gone!"
"Knocked out by a ball—an accident."
"Your right hand, and your nose has been peeled—how's that?"
"Slipped down at second base—only a mere scratch."
"And you like this sort of fun?"
"Glory in it, sir. It is the healthiest game in the world, sir!"

LETTER FROM FALL RIVER.

Fall River is a bustling place of a score of thousand population. It boasts of more spindles than Lowell. New cotton factories have been recently erected, and other manufactures are in operation doing large business. The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, has an important centre here. Hale Remington Esq., whose private hospitalities I have enjoyed a part of the time since coming to the history of the olden time called up the history of the olden time when Pequot and Narragansett and the early colonists were involved in long and harassing wars. It was at Fall River that the famous "Skeleton in armor" was found in 1834, while digging down a hill. An oval brazen breastplate, a tubal belt, with an envelope of coarse bark cloth covered the remains. The body is supposed to have been that of one of the Phoenician mariners who centuries ago were the fortunate discoverers of a New World, which became to them only a grave. Dighton Rock is near by covered with strange inscriptions, which sages as yet have been unable to translate. The ignorant have fancied that Captain Kid marked the rock as a hiding place for his treasures, while others have given equally fanciful stories in reference to the sculptures. Brazen vessels have also been found in this locality, which lead us to believe that these are marks of the same race which afterward settled in Mexico and South America. Enough of this. I had intended to speak more fully of the Fall River of to-day, especially what is doing in philanthropic effort, but must refrain. Last evening Pleasant Street Mission Chapel was filled with hundreds of intelligent children gathered by the labors of members of different churches. A large, substantial edifice, worth $6000, has been erected for their sole use. Their many voices joining in song, led by one of Smith's sweet-toned American organs, formed a chorus delightful to hear. A similar enterprise at the Alms House, on a small scale, is conducted by one of the noblest and most devoted ladies of the city. The Baptist societies are doing a good work in the same direction, of which, some facts at another time may be given. E. F. T.
Fall River, Sept. 30, 1867.

"Harrie stays very long," whispered a low, faint voice, from one corner of the cellar. "Do you not fear for him, dear wife? He is very young to wander alone over this great city."

"God will care for him, my husband. His artless, winning ways and his sweet face will make him friends. Yet it is hard that our darling, first-born one, should be a beggar boy."

"My father, O, my father," moaned the sick man, "if he would only see me once again."

There was a slight bustle at the door, and then it was pushed wide open. There was a firm, broad footfall, and a manly form bent over the sufferer.

"You called me, Charlie, a moment since," murmured the voice of a new comer.

"What would you have?"

"My father, O, my father, burst from the white lips in impassioned tones, give me your blessing ere I die, and, for my mother's sake, love these, so dear to him who was so dear to her."

"My son, O, my son," burst from his lips, but he dared not to trust himself to speak. His knees grew weak beneath him, and he sank beside the bed of straw and hid his face.

In a comfortable chamber was assembled a beauteous family group. They were a grey-haired sire, a blooming maiden, a saintly looking woman, a pale sick man, and two lovely little children, a noble boy of four and a tiny girl of some few months. A couch, silken and soft, was drawn close to the blazing grate, and on it rested the weak invalid, while beside him on a velvet cushion so near that she could hold his hand, sat the gentle lady.

The fair young girl was toying with the babe before a splendid mirror, the boy building castles with some fairy blocks, the old man leaning against the mantle, the maiden, worthy to be wrought in goblin tapestry, or drawn on canvas by a master-hand, exclaimed a rich yet mellow voice. They started, one and all, and the maiden blushed.

"It is now complete—the picture I mean," said Mr. Somers, as he grasped the manly hand. "We are all here—thanks," and clasped the child close to his heart, "thanks, my little beggar boy."

BASE BALL.
The following, which we find in an exchange, illustrates aptly, the mania for base ball playing which is so prevalent.

"What is the matter with your finger?"
"Struck with a ball and drove up, but it is a noble game, was the reply."

"Precisely—and your thumb is useless, is it not?"
"Yes, struck with a ball and broken."

"That finger joint!"
"A ball struck it. No better game to improve a man's physical condition—strengthens one's sinews."

"You walk lame, that foot, isn't it?"
"No; it is the—the—the—well, a bat flew out of a player's hand and hit my knee-pan. He had the innings."

before the federation of the United States was ever thought of. Practice making the letters, throwing the back over the p and f, and you will readily see how such a designated prefix will get into the (s) that we use. Once when trading in Mexico, having failed to use the term "pesos fuertes," to distinguish the kind of money I was to receive, my Mexican friend paid me three thousand dollars in sixpenny pieces, and shillings, and in his account he did not use our $.

TAKE CARE OF THE CHILDREN'S FEET.
Life-long disease and sudden death often come to children through the inattention of the parents. A child should never be allowed to go to sleep with cold feet; the thing to be the last attended to, in putting a child to bed, should be to see that the feet are perfectly warm; neglect of this has often resulted in a dangerous attack of croup, diphtheria, or fatal sore throat.

Always on coming from school, on entering the house from a visit or errand in rainy, muddy, or thawing weather, the child's shoes should be removed, and the mother should herself ascertain if the stockings are the least damp; and if so, should require them to be taken off, the feet held before the fire and rubbed with the hand till perfectly dry, and another pair of stockings be put on, and another pair of shoes, while the other stockings and shoes should be placed where they can be well dried, so as to be ready for future use at a moment's notice.

EARLY MASSACHUSETTS MARRIAGES.
It is a curious fact, illustrating the strong prejudices of our Puritan fathers against the religious forms in England, that the earlier marriage services in this Commonwealth were all performed by the civil magistrate. The ministers were not expected to officiate, unless to assist either in offering prayer or in making a religious exhortation for the good of the company.

In the Journal of Gov. Winthrop for 1647, a singular record is made. A minister of Hingham was invited to preach in Boston on occasion of a great wedding, where the bride-groom was from Hingham. But the magistrates interposed to forbid his officiating, and one reason assigned is, "We are not willing to bring in the English custom of ministers performing the solemnity of marriage, which sermons at such times might induce, but if any ministers were present, and would bestow a word of exhortation, it was permitted."

VALUABLE LAND.
A recent paragraph touching paper cities, reminds a Watertown correspondent of the mania for speculation that raged throughout the country in 1836, and ran particularly high in Oswego. Mr. De Z. resided there and owned considerable real estate, which he caused to be surveyed into city lots and mapped. A superb lithograph was got up, showing a great number of streets, avenues, etc. This he took into Wall street for exhibition and to make sale of his lots. Several gentlemen were examining it one day, when one of them inquired—
"Mr. De Z., what kind of buildings are on this property?"

"Buildings!" rejoined the exhibitor. "Buildings! why gentlemen, the land covered by this map is altogether too valuable to build on!"

MURPHIES vs. ST. CLAIRS.
A certain gentleman of the Milesian persuasion, who had achieved some little newspaper notoriety in this country, and the initials of whose last name, if put together, would spell Murphy, for some reason or other, and much to the disgust of his brother Irishmen, changed his time-honored patronymic to the more hiberno "cognomen" of St. Clair. Every one knows how much it hurts an Irishman's feelings to see a brother Irishman "go back on the cold sock," and you may be sure that he got many a sharp rap over the knuckles, as the saying is, for the change of name. Some time during the war, our hero was stopping at M. House, as was also a dashing young Irish officer of our army. They chanced to be vis a vis, at table, and Major J., who always goes in for a joke, whether at his own expense or some one else's, thought the opportunity was too good to be lost, so he sings out to the waiter!

"Patrick."
"Patrick," said the waiter.

"Bring me a St. Clair," said the major in his matter-of-fact way.
"A which, sir?" says Pat.
"A St. Clair, I said, don't you understand the American dialect?"

Pat, sorely bothered, scratched his head, and replied:
"Shure, Ameriky is a quare country and I never heard such a thing asked before, sur, at all."

"Well, Patrick, quoth our joker, with the air of one about to impart useful knowledge, 'it's a potato I want; we used to call them 'Murphies' at home, but I believe the polite name for them in this country is St. Clair.'"

The Major hit hard this time at least, for the owner of the "polite" name left the table, amid the unrestrained roars of the company, who understood and fully appreciated the "joke," and I believe that was his last appearance on that stage.

FITNESS NOT ABILITY.
The failure of many men is not because they do not possess ability, but because they do not know how to use it. The choice of business in life in nine cases in ten is left to chance, or caprice, or anything but what it should be. As a result, very many occupy places which they never fill, are loaded with tasks they never accomplish, and are in pursuit of objects they never reach. This explains the disjointed, eccentric, irregular state of things seen in almost every community. If we all knew our gauge, started right, and never run off the track, the working force of society would be far greater than now, and its results of far more consequence.

THE DOLLAR MARK.
A correspondent of the New York Post writes to that paper, as follows:
You are wrong for once in regard to this thing, ($) which we prefix to the figures that represent our capital, income, or our expenses, as the case may be.

It is the contraction of two Spanish words, "Pesos fuertes," which means literally hard money. They are made thus, p's, the s commonly backs over the p and f. I have seen them on accounts made

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

GENERAL SHERIDAN. Our correspondent "E. P. T." who accompanied General Sheridan from Fall River to Boston, writes us in a private note as follows: "Passing through Quincy he expressed satisfaction as I pointed out the home of the Adamses and other points of interest, and expressed the wish that leisure were had to visit the historic places in the environs of Boston. He appears in good health, and expressed a grateful surprise at the heartiness and enthusiasm of his reception all along the route."

The officers of the Old Colony Railroad deserve praise for their public spirit in stopping the train at way stations to gratify thousands of those who wished to see our distinguished guest, but who would otherwise have been obliged to have been at the expense of a visit to the city. Such courtesy, exercised even against their pecuniary interests, is worthy commendation. President Stearns, Superintendent Bullock, and the wide awake Conductor, A. R. Porter, were on the alert, attending to the comfort and safety of those on and crowding about the cars. That no accident occurred is a matter of thankful congratulation.

BIRTHDAY PARTY. The brothers, sisters and other relatives of Mr. Jos. W. Whiting, to the number of thirty odd, met at his residence on Monday evening last, taking him entirely by surprise, it being Mr. Whiting's fifth birthday, and as he was the youngest brother, they thought it a fitting occasion to notice it. Appropriate remarks were made by his eldest brother, Mr. G. S. T. Whiting, congratulating him on the event, and the many pleasant associations which had attended him, thus far, in his journey through life. A short address, also, applicable to the occasion, (prepared by Mrs. G. Whiting) was read by their son, J. B. W. After which Mr. Franklin Brown, in behalf of the family, again surprised the honored couple by a very handsome present. At the conclusion of these ceremonies, the company assembled around a sumptuously spread table, (furnished by the guests) and a most pleasant and agreeable evening was passed.

QUINCY SAVINGS BANK. At a meeting of the Board of officers of this Bank, held on the 3d instant, the following Resolutions were passed:

A valued, an honest, a faithful and long-tried associate and member of this Board is no longer with us. Josiah Brigham, the President of the Quincy Savings Bank has been touched by the hand of Death, and his spirit has passed "over the river" to the bright and beautiful shore. By his decease, this Institution has lost an earnest friend, one ever careful of its interests. He was a true counsellor, whose efforts and intelligence were a strong support from the commencement of its action, and through its early trials, to its present successful and prosperous condition.

We, the Trustees of this Institution, Resolve, That for his untiring and devoted services to its welfare—for his kind and unvarying urbanity extended towards us, his associates, and for the perfect integrity of his character, we will ever hold his memory in respectful and grateful remembrance.

Resolved, That we tender to his family our sympathy for their bereavement, and direct the Secretary of our Board to transmit to them as an expression of our feelings a copy of these Resolutions.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS. At the Republican Caucus held at the Town Hall on Saturday evening last, the following named gentlemen were chosen delegates to attend the County Senatorial and Councilor Conventions for the nomination of Candidates to be voted for in the coming election:

Charles Marsh, Henry Barker, William Ditson, E. Granville Pratt, Charles A. Howland, H. Farnum Smith.

The Sunday afternoon lectures at the Boston Music Hall under the auspices of the Spiritualists of Boston and vicinity are attracting considerable attention. Judge Edmonds delivered the opening lecture last Sunday afternoon to a very large audience. W. Eugene Thayer, who is announced to play the Great Organ, half hour preceding each lecture, played exceedingly well on the above occasion. The course runs through the Fall, Winter and Spring months; and the second lecture of the course (to-morrow afternoon) is announced to be delivered by the greatest inspirational speaker in America, Thomas Gales Foster, of Washington, (D. C.) Lyander S. Richards, of this town, presides, and is, we learn, entrusted with the management of the entire course.

ACCIDENT. A little boy about eight years old, the adopted son of Mr. Thomas Bates, was run over by one of the heavy stone teams that ply between our ledges and the wharves. The accident occurred ten days ago. The wheels passed over the lower part of his body. It was thought that he could not possibly survive, his internal injuries were so severe. His life for several days was in great jeopardy, but to-day we are informed by his surgeon, Dr. Underwood, that he will recover. His parents are made most happy by his wonderful escape from death, and attribute this result almost entirely to the judicious and kindly care of the attentive doctor.

ADDRESS. It will be seen by our availing ourselves that E. E. Williamson, Esq., will deliver an address, by special request, in the Town Hall, this evening, on the "Progress of the Republican Party and the present situation of National Affairs." The Band will be present and a very interesting time may be expected.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, OCT. 10, 1867.

General Sheridan.—The Elections.—Business Matters.—Fraternity Lecture.—Woman's Rights advocated.

The week past has been lively and exciting in Boston. General Sheridan has been received everywhere in Massachusetts with a spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm; and his ride through the North is as triumphant as his ride through the "Valley." Truly, honors have been paid to the man who knoweth the right and knowing dared to maintain. His reception by all parties of men, shows how abiding the love of union dwells in the public heart, and how much we appreciate those who were prominent instruments in saving our republic in the perilous days of the late rebellion. Welcome to brave Sheridan as he rides in triumph over the hills of Massachusetts.

The elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa, have profoundly attracted the attention of public men, officials and politicians throughout the country. Indeed, it has absorbed every thing of interest. The Boston Journal of last evening admits, "We have a decided unpleasant aspect." But it says, "next year the issues will be decided, and the straight issue of whether the royal men of the country shall govern it, or whether it shall be placed in the hands of treason sympathizers and abettors. When that issue is presented fairly the result cannot be doubtful." The Democrats in these elections have made great gains, but to the moment of my writing, Ohio and Pennsylvania are in doubt.

The business market through the week has been unsettled and feverish. Money hard to get except at high rates. The banks unable to meet the wants of all their customers. The deficiency of the wheat crop in England, will demand a great import of flour from the United States as any year on record. Grain here has consequently gone up, and will go up, at a still higher figure. The best brands of flour are quoted at $14.50 per barrel; corn at $1.50 per bushel. As it is now quite certain that France and England will take all our surplus breadstuffs, prices here will continue to range high, to the injury of the masses.

The lecture season in this modern Athens is opening favorably. The address before the Fraternity Association on Tuesday evening at the Music Hall by Theodore Tilton, the editor of the New York Independent, was of unusual interest, and attracted a great audience. The theme was "upon the American Woman."

And in the few words we shall have to say, it is impossible to do it justice. We can merely allude to some of the strong points. He showed that the great question for the past generation has been the negro, but that has been settled, and the absorbing question for the generation to come is "Woman." In the past, woman's place was at the foot of man, but in the present, she has been raised to a co-equal place with man. American politics recognizes four inferior classes—negroes, Indians, Irish and women. The ballot is not denied to women because they are not good citizens, not because they fail to be orderly members of society, nor because they cannot read and write, for nineteenth of the men in the country have been taught to read and write by women. There is no reason for denying the right of suffrage to women, except that which exists in the prejudice of the past. If there is a right to vote, white men, black men and colored men all have that right. He did not claim that women were angels, for he knew that a great many excellent women and not a great many excellent men. Women are equally joined in wedlock, and perform equal duties in society. They are taxed, but have no representation. If men do all the voting, they should pay all the taxing. The old principle of trial by jury, provided that every one should be tried by a jury of his peers. But women are tried by men, and men cannot be regarded as the peers of women, until women are accepted as the peers of men. The men of America would go to war to-day to vindicate the right of trial by jury, and still they deny the same right and principle to their wives and daughters. Give women the ballot and they will be able to command wages commensurate with the services they render. Men may wag their heads as much as they please, but the boys and girls who go to school side by side to-day, will surely go to the ballot box in twenty years from hence. The lecture occupied an audience and a half in its delivery, and the audience manifested their interest in the subject by frequent and enthusiastic applause. We have given but an imperfect synopsis of Mr. Tilton's able discourse. In reviewing his arguments we can only add, that whatever scruples we may have heretofore had as to female suffrage, we will now knock under, and say let the women vote. Le bon temps viendra.

Resolved, That we tender to his family our sympathy for their bereavement, and direct the Secretary of our Board to transmit to them as an expression of our feelings a copy of these Resolutions.

THE NOMINATION ACCEPTED.

John Quincy Adams, Esq. has accepted the nomination to the gubernatorial office by the Democratic State Convention, in the following letter:

QUINCY, OCT. 5th, 1867.
Horatio G. Parker, Esq.: President of the Democratic Convention, &c.

DEAR SIR: I have just received your letter, informing me of my nomination by the "Democratic and Conservative men of Massachusetts" to be their candidate for Governor of the Commonwealth at the next election. I pray you, as President of the Convention, to accept on behalf of that body my thanks for the compliment to the name I inherit.

Conscious that I have neither aspiration nor peculiar fitness for the position, I had at the first suggestion to me of such action requested the Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee to withdraw my name absolutely from the consideration of the meeting. This course having proved ineffectual, it only remains for me now to decide whether I have good reason to persist in that withdrawal.

After having been reluctantly compelled to differ with my friends of the Republican party last Fall, upon grave political questions, I wished to avoid any public action for at least two years, as I hoped in that period to correct or confirm my opinions upon national policy, and no earlier opportunity for effective intervention in national affairs would offer.

I think, however, that in momentous times any man's fellow-citizens may demand from him a definite expression of opinion upon public affairs, if they think it worth while to ask it, and no man of ordinary self-respect can evade the call. I regard this nomination as such a call upon me, and I wish to answer it with perfect frankness.

I have hoped to find common ground to stand upon with the mass of Conservative men whom I sincerely respect, who still act with the Republican party; but the recent course of that party has very much abated my confidence in such a result.

They seem very lately at Worcester to have allowed their hatred of a man to supply the lack of any declaration of principles on National affairs, and their dread of intestine strife to gag their speech on State questions.

So far as the latter Convention, over which you, sir, presided, thought fit to promulgate official opinions, I find nothing advanced in them which I cannot adopt, although I confess that I entertain some strong opinions upon questions which I presume it was thought were not involved in such a purely local issue as that before us.

I am glad to see the doctrine of State Rights, as understood and promulgated by the founders of our Commonwealth and by the Fathers of our National Union, rescued from unmerited obloquy and cherished by you, as it must be by all, if the New England States are to retain their Senatorial preponderance in Congress.

Upon questions of finance and taxation it is difficult to reconcile the incompetence which pervades our system of impost, with a presumption of honest intent in the legislators who framed it.

No man who assumes a capacity to make laws at this day should dare to plead in excuse of his blunders an abject ignorance of the first principles of political economy and an utter indifference to the recorded results of experience. But the intolerable burden of an exploded and unscientific plan of internal taxation, combined with a tariff which is nothing but legalized robbery, must have been saddled upon the people by gross ignorance or fraud, and if not speedily removed it will furnish the exhausted taxpayer with a semblance of reason for repudiation.

We cannot, however, affect these national questions by our votes at this election, further than by demanding, as is done in the resolutions of your convention, a rigid economy in State expenditure, and I turn to the practical and immediate questions of State policy which only are properly before us for decision.

Upon these questions I see no considerable divergence between the conflicting parties, except that one has thought fit to renounce what I have always considered the most essential attributes of a party—an opinion upon the local question which seems most to interest the people of this Commonwealth.

I confess that my inclination is to an open declaration by men and parties of what they think upon any question of considerable debate.

The course of the Convention over which you had the honor to preside seems to me, therefore, to stand in very honorable contrast to the timorous and time-serving tone of the previous Convention at Worcester.

I am the more repelled by the political jockeying there attempted, because I know that most of the wise and conservative men of the Republican party justly regard these sordid laws as preposterous intrusions by statute of the lawful domain of morals.

When called on therefore to take a side upon the questions touched by the resolutions of the conflicting parties, I should meanly equivocate if I attempted to disguise my hearty preference for the policy declared by the Democratic Convention.

After this too detailed avowal of my opinions, I should feel that I arrogated an absurd importance to my personal preferences if I should still decline to stand as the candidate of the large and respectable body whose action you have kindly conveyed to me.

"I am, very respectfully,
"Your obedient servant,
"JOHN Q. ADAMS."

"THE STREET LIGHTS."

To the Editor of the Patriot—

Last week there was a short article in your paper, headed "the street lights," signed "J." Evidently if "J." had been a trifle better posted on the subject matter of his epistle, he never would have allowed such statements to have been made. Our worthy citizen, Mr. Perry, has charge of the lights, and acts strictly in conformity to the specific instructions of the Selectmen, who assure him that they have no fault to find with his management, although some person unknown, who calls himself "J" in the Patriot, grumbles and growls. Undoubtedly this man "J" would find fault if the Selectmen should employ forty of the most efficient men in town to look after the lamps. When he says the lights are shut off "at 10 p. m. instead of 11," he exhibits that looseness which characterizes his entire assertions, and is false in every particular. The lamps, by order, are not to be lit whenever there is a prospect of sufficient light from the moon; and as to the dirt upon the lanterns, Mr. Perry has never stipulated with the authorities to keep them clean. Some persons like to find fault,—it is their nature,—and "J" has shown that he can safely be included in the category of grumblers.

I learn that Mr. Perry would most gladly resign his charge of street lights, and earnestly recommend to the favor of the Selectmen the gentleman who styled himself "J," as a man better fitted for the high position. As he is out of the night, he could shut off the gas at such an hour as would most please him, and thus accommodate many citizens.

A CITIZEN.

SUPPORT OF THE POOR. The Randolph Register says, "It is most worthy in a people to take good care of the poor. But it is unfortunate to have more than our share of this class. The standing of our town as compared with some of our neighbors is quite noticeable on this point. 'For the support of the poor, in and out of the almshouse.'"

Weymouth,	7975	4,129
North Bridgewater,	6332	2,542
Quincy,	6718	2,248
Newton,	8978	2,402

"Of these six towns, Randolph, with the smallest population, expends the largest amount."

FASHIONS. We have received from that enterprising modiste, Madame Demore's Mammoth bulletin of Fashions, (70 figures) for ladies, for the Fall and Winter of 1867-8; and also another of less proportions (51 figures) for children of all ages, each are accompanied by ten full-size patterns and a pamphlet of descriptions; the prices are, for ladies, $2.50; for children, $1.50.

This is a really a "big thing." Bulletins of fashions are issued semi-annually for gentlemen, but this is the first attempt to reduce the idea to practice for the benefit of ladies and children; and it is done with the liberality that characterizes all this lady's undertakings. The mammoth plates contain every variety of dress, beautifully colored for actual wear, together with patterns and the useful hints contained in the description books, should, we think, prove invaluable to every lady and mother, as well as every dressmaker. The plain patterns alone are worth much more than the cost of the whole.

For sale by Mrs. Demore, 473 Broadway, New York.

TO UNION PRISONERS. The Congressional Committee charged with investigating the treatment of Union Prisoners will commence their session for taking testimony for the NEW ENGLAND STATES at Boston, on Tuesday next, the 15th inst., and will probably remain in session for several weeks.

It is the desire of the Committee that all persons who have been Prisoners in the hands of the rebels shall have ample notice and opportunity for presenting their testimony before the Committee, and every soldier and citizen desirous of appearing before the Committee is requested to send his address to A. F. Stevens, at Nashua, N. H., as early as possible, in order that the necessary arrangements may be made to secure their attendance without inconvenience or delay.

For Sale or to Let.

Summary Intelligence.

It is stated that the rate of taxation determined by the Tax Commissioner, which is the average rate in the State, is $17.67 on $1000. This is the rate of taxation to be paid by corporations, and is over two dollars in excess of the tax rate in Boston.

A pair of shoes twenty-five and a half inches in length and seven in width were recently built for a Virginia negro.

A single dealer in eggs in western New York sent over half a million of them to market at New York in three weeks.

Gloucester is the largest municipality not under a city government in New England.

J. H. Dodge of Portsmouth, N. H., recently set a hen on 14 eggs, and she hatched 15 chickens.

$20,000 will be realized from the State Prison at Charlestown this year.

A manufacturer in Lynn has made and sold this season thirty thousand pairs of base ball shoes.

Potatoes are selling in the streets of Skowhegan, Me., at 60 cts. more or less; butter at 25 to 35; eggs 25 to 28.

In Canada silver is so plenty that traders are refusing to take it in payment of debt above the legal tender and people write complaints to the papers about "the silver nuisance."

Six and three quarter million of acres in Europe are devoted to potatoes. Nearly one third of this amount is in France.

The Winthrop (Me.) Bulletin says pork is a drug in the market there. Round hogs are selling for seven to ten cents per pound; and when we take into consideration the fact that they have been fattened on corn at $1.25 to $1.40, it will be seen that the farmers will be great losers. Pigs are very plenty, and can hardly be given away.

Ice is made at the rate of half a pint a minute by means of a new machine which cost about twelve dollars, the only other expense being the labor of pumping. By being enlarged and working it by machinery, the cost would be even less.

Vermont reduced its State debt $206,000 during the last year.

Ohio was, by the census of 1860 the third State in the Union. It gives more attention to the productions of wool, having the largest number of sheep of any State, viz: 6,568,052, out of 32,695,797 in the United States. The live stock in the State was valued, in 1866, at $151,000,000, which exceeds that of any State except New York, being $170,552,506.

WINTER'S BALM OF Wild Cherry.

Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma Croup, Quinsy, Whooping Cough, and the numerous and as dangerous diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, prevail in our changeable climate at all seasons of the year, few are fortunate enough to escape their baneful influence. How important then to have at hand a certain and safe remedy, which will cure the sufferer, and restore him to his usual state of health.

From S. S. PERKINS, Esq., of Boston, a well known Contractor and Builder.

Dr. W. W. Fowler.

One day, I was severely ill, accompanied by a very sore throat and sick headache, which completely incapacitated me for business. I had taken but a small portion of a single bottle of this Balm, when I experienced immediate relief. My cough was broken up at once, and my lungs entirely relieved from the pressure which had become so painful. I attribute this entirely to the good effects of your Wild Cherry Balm. I look to your medicine as a certain cure for all such ailments.

Respectfully yours, S. S. PERKINS.

Prepared by S. W. FOWLER & SON, 11 Tremont Street, Boston, and for sale by Druggists generally.

SCROFULA.

Dr. H. A. HARRIS, of Paris, one of the most eminent Chemists of Europe, said:—

"The most astonishing results may be anticipated when Iodine is dissolved in pure water."

Dr. H. A. HARRIS, after three years of scientific research and experiment, has succeeded in dissolving one and one quarter grains of Iodine in each fluid ounce of water, and the most extraordinary results have been obtained, particularly in Scrofula and diseases therefrom. Circular free.

Dr. H. A. HARRIS' Iodine Water is for sale by J. P. DINS-MORE, Proprietor, 265 Broadway, N. Y., and all Druggists, Oct. 12.

Selected Poetry.

SOUNDS.

The sweet, sweet sound of the morning breeze
In the fields of waving wheat;
The low, low sigh of the woodland trees
In the panting sound of the sea.
The pleasant music of gentle words
From the lips of those we love;
The mellow whistle of waking birds
In the shadows of the grove.
The prattle of our little ones
While they sleep their evening prayer;
The murmur of the rill that runs
By meadows green and fair.
The sad, sad sound of the kiss that falls
On lips that kiss no more;
The dull, dull thud in the earthen walls
Ere we close the grassy door.

Farmers' Department.

FROST HELPS THE FARMER.

In this climate winter rarely sets in until from frequent and heavy rains the ground is pretty thoroughly saturated with water. It would be a misfortune to the agriculturist to have the soil freeze solid and permanently for the season on the heels of a drouth. Wells and springs would fail in the winter time, and the action of frost could not prove so beneficial to the land as if larger quantities of water were present in it. Few take note of the actual effect of the freezing and thawing upon all kinds of soil, more especially on the heavy and therefore retentive ones. These most need the action of the frost and nature has provided for them to receive it to a greater extent than naturally light, porous soils. The water is dispersed all through the pores of the soil, and by its expansion when frozen it cracks, pulverizes, lifts apart the particles from each other, to a more minute degree than it is possible to accomplish by any machinery. While this action is favorable to the extension of the roots of plants, it doubtless sets free much plant food which is physically so combined as before to be unavailable as fertilizers. So the looser the soil is left before winter, the better will be the action of frost upon it. On heavy lands, spaded gardens and plowed fields late in autumn are signs of good husbandry.—Rural New Yorker.

Seeding with Rye, to Plough in.

Much of our light land may be improved by ploughing in a green crop, and perhaps nothing will answer better for this purpose than winter rye. The expense of the seed is but small for an acre, a bushel being sufficient, and if we get a good growth it will afford a large amount of foliage by the last of June next, when it may be rolled down and turned under, unless the owner thinks it too valuable to be used for that purpose, as very many do. But taking a common sense view of the matter, in what way can a man enrich his light land so cheaply as by this? An acre of good rye or buckwheat turned under the soil, is fully equal to ten, if not fifteen loads of barnyard manure. The ploughing and getting it in, with the seed, we think will not cost more than six, or seven dollars, and the land will feel the beneficial effects of it for a number of years. We believe if our farmers make the trial on a small scale at first, they will be so much pleased with their success that they will continue it with remunerative results.—Midwest Worker.

CHARCOAL FOR FATTENING TURKIES.

"I have made an experiment," says a writer, "in feeding charcoal to fattening turkeys, and the result surprised me. Four turkeys were confined in a pen and fed on meal, boiled potatoes and oats. Four others of the same breed were also, at the same time, confined in another pen and fed on the same articles, but with one pint of very finely pulverized charcoal mixed with their food—mixed meal and boiled potatoes. They had also a plentiful supply of broken charcoal in their pen. The eight were killed on the same day and there was a difference of one and a half pounds each in favor of the turkeys which had been supplied with the charcoal, they being much the fatter and the meat greatly superior in point of tenderness and flavor."

Incidents.

"Why do you not admire my daughter?" said a proud mother to a gentleman. "Because," he replied "I am no judge of paintings."

"But surely," replied the lady, not in the least disconcerted by this reflection, "you never saw an angel that was not painted."

A Scotchman went to a lawyer once for advice, and detailed the circumstances of the case.

"Have you told me the fact precisely as they occurred?" said the lawyer.

"Oh, ay, sir?" rejoined he "I told it best to tell you plain truth; ye can put the lies in yourself."

"Ma," said an inquisitive little girl, "will rich and poor folks live together when they go to Heaven?"

"Yes, my dear, they will be all alike there."

"Then, ma, why don't rich and poor Christians associate together here?"

"The mother did not answer."

"Bill, did you ever go to sea?"

"I guess I did; last year, for instance. I went to see a red-headed girl, but I only called there once."

"Why so?"

"Because her brother had an unpleasant habit of throwing bootjacks and smoothing irons at people."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1867.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

ACCIDENT. On Tuesday last, as Mr. A. J. Chase, of the firm of Smith & Chase, granite dealers of this town, was engaged in splitting a stone weighing near six tons, at the quarry of the above firm, he was seriously injured in the foot, by a portion of the stone falling upon him. He had barely time to escape a more serious injury.

A WARNING TO DRUNKARDS. Before Justice Adams, on Saturday last, Cornelius Connor was fined two dollars and costs, in all, amounting to $8 36, for being drunk and taking lodgings in the old Cemetery. For some time past, Mr. Underwood, the Superintendent of Cemeteries, has been much annoyed by complaints that persons were in the habit of getting drunk and laying about in the Cemeteries, and in that condition they were certainly a nuisance to every person who may wish to visit the graves of their friends, who must be passing there; and we understand that he intends to abate the nuisance by complaining of every one found there in that condition, and we know that he will.

AUCTION. We would call the attention of our readers to the sale of Granite Quarries and house lots, belonging to the estate of Francis Jackson, Esq., which are advertised in our columns. Sale to take place on Friday next. For full particulars see notice.

BASE BALL. The match game which was to have been played by the first and second nines of the Actives, on Saturday last, was postponed until this afternoon.

A CHIEF OF THE OLD BLOCK. After reading Mr. Adams' letter a New York paper calls him a chief of the old block, and says old John was never more outspoken than his great grand-son.

A NEW TOWN. A large and enthusiastic meeting of citizens representing the several villages of Hyde Park, Fairmount, Mattapan, Readville, Mill Village, located in the towns of Dorchester, Milton, and Dedham, was held on Monday evening last at Hyde Park, for the purpose of taking preliminary measures toward the formation of a new town by a consolidation of the above named villages. The meeting was called to order by Mr. E. P. Davis, and Messrs Samuel A. Bradbury and Charles A. Jordan were respectively appointed Chairman and Secretary. The subject was warmly discussed, the citizens generally manifesting intense interest in the matter. A Committee was appointed, consisting of sixteen gentlemen, representing the several districts, to inquire into the expediency of the proposed formation of a new town, and after an almost unanimous vote in favor of the movement, the meeting adjourned until Tuesday evening next.

ANNEXATION OF DORCHESTER. On Monday, by the Boston Board of Aldermen, John A. Andrew, Nathaniel C. Nash and Avery Plummer were appointed commissioners on the part of the city of Boston to confer with the commissioners appointed by the Selectmen of Dorchester on the subject of annexation, and to consider the whole matter and report to the City Council upon the financial and industrial and sanitary condition of Dorchester, or such portions thereof, if any, as they recommend for annexation.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY. Mr. James Norberry reports about one o'clock Wednesday afternoon, while walking in the highway at Hyde Park, he was attacked by three young men between the ages of 19 and 25 years, who robbed him of $5 in cash and a valise containing clothing.

Rev. S. T. Aldrich will deliver a temperance address to-morrow evening in the Hancock St. Church at 7 1/2 o'clock.

NORFOLK COUNTY NOMINATIONS. Thirty delegates took part in the Norfolk County Democratic convention, held in Dedham on Tuesday. Dr. W. S. Pattee, of this town presided, and S. H. Cox of Dedham, was appointed Secretary.

On motion of Robert Vose, Jr., James Ford of Dedham, was nominated for Register of Deeds.

Charles Hammond, Jr., of Medford, was nominated for County Treasurer.

William Aspinwall, Esq., of Brookline, was nominated for County Commissioner.

George Pennington, Esq., of Milton, was nominated for Second Norfolk Democratic Convention held at Dedham.

We call the attention of all officers that were appointed at last meeting of the High School Association last year, to the Special Notice in our columns, as it is of the greatest importance.

A CONSOLIDATION. At last the Boston and Worcester, and Western Railroads have consolidated, under the requirements of the statute of last May, and a meeting of the stockholders of the two roads, now entitled the Boston and Albany Railroad, has been called for a day in the current month. There are yet certain matters of appraisement to be adjusted, which will probably require the reference to the Commissioners provided by the law. But the fact is a completed one and that the two roads are one, and that the stockholders in each have as much voting power as they had before. Thus we finally link together roads that form a grand line to the West.

FENIAN WAR MATERIAL. President Roberts states that within the past two weeks the Fenians have bought $140,000 worth of new war material.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, OCT. 17, 1867.

Finance.—The public mind awakening to its importance.—Return to specie payments.—Business aspects.—The Theatrical Public Lectures.

The financial condition of our country, though not now a question of politics, will soon be an important one. The subject of finance is a profound branch of study in political economy. It cannot be denied that our present depreciated currency works many evils. It demoralizes the community with temptations to corrupt practices. It increases the expenses of government, National, State and Municipal, and presses hard upon the industrial classes. Our taxes are high, with no hope of relief. Prices for the daily wants of life have no decrease. It takes all that the industrious mechanic can earn from week to week to support his family. If the rich are not growing richer, the poor are growing poorer. The true remedy doubtless is the contraction of paper currency to the standard of specie values. But this is easier to talk about than to accomplish. Where is our gold? In Europe. The past four years we have exported gold to the amount of two hundred million dollars. It is reported that the money markets of Europe are now overflowing with specie. France was never before so glutted with specie as at the present time, and rates of interest in England are reduced to the low minimum of two per cent. The remedy for our country now groaning from the ills of an inflated paper currency is a return to specie payments.

The latest financial scheme for relieving our woes, is that the Government shall resume specie payment on the 30th of June next of the fiscal year. That a direct tax should be imposed on the outstanding debt. So that all holders of the seven-thirty and fifty-twenty bonds can well afford then to pay a moderate tax on them. Either lay a tax on bonds or fund the present issue on bonds into a new issue bearing a less rate of interest.

Notwithstanding business is really dull, there is no lack of vivacity in our community. The gala season has arrived for social evening parties. Some of them have been conducted on a grand scale. The theatres are well attended. In the depressed state of trade, probably many go there to keep the "blues off."

The Lecture season is under full headway. The Rev. Mr. Conner ably addressed the Mercantile Library Association: Subject, "The Good Old Days;" and the Rev. J. D. Fulton, on "Woman's Right to be a Woman," at the Tremont Temple last evening. To-night John B. Gough speaks before the Young Men's Christian Association, on "The Lights and Shadows of London Life."

WINTER. The past few days have forcibly reminded us of a change of season, and as the days shorten, giving us long evenings, we naturally turn our attention, and very properly so, to our lamps, for a good light, either to sew or read by, is very requisite for our enjoyment and preservation of our sight, which is often injured by the use of poor light, as also by improper substances used for illuminating purposes. We now refer to Kerosene, so commonly used. There is no light more injurious to the sight, and as a prolific source of throat disease it has no equal—a fact well known by many scientific men who have given it their attention. As a substitute, possessing every requisite qualification, and when once used readily appreciated, we unhesitatingly recommend, after a careful trial, "JONES' Non-explosive Fluid," principal depot 85 Friend Street, Boston. This fluid can be used in the ordinary Kerosene Lamp, used with the new Sun Burner; it gives most decidedly the best light that can be found.

TONNAGE OF THE UNITED STATES. The latest official returns of American tonnage, in 1866, give the total at 4,310,676 tons; which shows a diminution since 1861, of 1,229,087 tons.

THE IMPEACHMENT TESTIMONY. The printing of the impeachment testimony has been resumed at the Government printing office. Twelve printers are engaged on it, none of whom, it is ascertained, are sworn to secrecy. The work is going on at the rate of about ten pages a day, and the whole of it will be completed and furnished to the members of the Judiciary Committee before the meeting of Congress.

Broad street, Philadelphia, is eleven miles and a half long, in one straight line, and one hundred and fifteen feet wide, extending from League Island, on the Delaware River, to the Northern boundary of the present city limits. At its present rate of improvement, it will require only a few years to make it the most magnificent thoroughfare in the world.

A sailing carriage, designed for crossing the plains, has been made at St. Louis. Its wheels are ten feet high; it has two upright jib sails, and a sail on each spoke of the two wheels on one side of the wagon. The steering gear acts on the forward wheels. The body is shaped like a boat, and hung low, and will be used as a boat in crossing the streams.

Snow. At the lakes in the northern part of Maine, the last week of September, the snow fell to the depth of ten inches. At Rumford, Oxford County, there were four inches, which remained on the ground and roofs of buildings all day. Such a snow storm was never before known in those regions in the month of September.

BANKRUPTCY IN MASSACHUSETTS. Up to this date, only two hundred and sixty petitions under the bankruptcy act have been filed in this State. Proceedings are in progress in two hundred and forty-one cases. The small number of applications is proof of the sound condition of the business men of the State.

For the Patriot.

Rise and Progress of the Republican Party.

Our townsman, E. E. Williamson, Esq., gave an interesting address on the "Political Situation," in the Town Hall, on Saturday evening last. It was well written, and evidently embodied much thought and research. Possessing a good voice, his enunciation was clear and distinct, so that all could hear him from every part of the Hall. The theme was the rise and progress of the Republican party for the past two decades; an expansive and fertile field of investigation for every American citizen. This great organization, the union republican party saved our republic from dissolution, fearfully threatened by the late rebellion. He illustrated the present dominant party as one of progress,—progress in the ideas of humanity and freedom. The great political question of the day is now narrowed down to universal suffrage. For social happiness, the wants of the blackman and those of the white man are precisely the same; the interests of all laboring classes are alike; all need the protection of the law, and the ballot box is the only means of securing it. The ballot rebukes and rejects unfaithful public servants. Its influence organizes schools for the masses. Universal suffrage imparts equal political rights and privileges. The lecturer showed that freedom has given to the North unexampled prosperity, and constantly increasing wealth and power. Free institutions will secure to the South the same results. But there must be a co-operation of the races upon the principles which prevail in the North, and to which the Republican party are fully committed.

For more than two hundred years the slave aristocracy of the South originated its policy, and controlled its destinies, and the result has been one of disaster and calamity. He urged, and we think truthfully, universal suffrage as the basis in contributing peace, progress and prosperity to the States and to the country,—and this he demonstrated as the key to the reconstruction scheme of Congress. There can be restoration, conciliation, friendship and prosperity for all, if the States lately in rebellion rebuild their institutions upon the principles of justice. But if they dwell upon the past they reject the precious boon now offered to them.

The peroration of Mr. Williamson's lecture touched on the State issues that will be met at the polls at the approaching annual election. He argued with firmness and courtesy, that in many of our State matters reforms were necessary. The unprejudiced mind of any Republican citizen of Massachusetts will admit this. The law of Prohibition as to the sale of liquors, has not worked well. Designing to favor the temperance reform, it retards it,—a fact which is lamentably shown by the rapid increase of drunkenness. The theory of Prohibition is plausible, but the efforts to carry it into practice have proved unavailing for many years past. On the liquor question, public sentiment is fast reaching the standard of stringent regulation, and lessening its hold in the belief that our Prohibitory Laws can ever be reduced to general practice. That the Republican party may not suffer from this side issue, Mr. Williamson urges the selection from its ranks of those men as legislators, who favor the judicious regulation by law for the sale of spirituous liquors. The lecture occupied one hour and a half, and was listened to by an attentive audience. The Quincy Brass Band were present on this occasion, and discoursed sweet and inspiring music. Their presence at any public meeting adds much to its pleasure and interest.

For the Patriot.

Would it be asking too much of the Street Commissioners, that they should see to it that more force of carts and horses, as well as men, be added immediately to the present small force at work on Hancock street,—as at present rate of progress it looks as if those whose houses are nearly isolated from the world, are to be subject to the great inconvenience they now experience 'till far into the winter months.

The great necessity of levelling this steep hill it appears to me will justify despatch in doing it.

Quincy, October 17, 1867.

OUR HOME,—ON THE HILLSIDE. Danville, New York.

A delightful one, we should think, as represented to us in a note accompanying a photograph view of the same,—repeating midst rich and most picturesque scenery,—mountains and valleys, wooded slopes, besides which runs the sparkling brook, with well-cultivated farms to enrich the picture, no wonder it has become a favorite resort of those who are seeking after health, and the benefits to be derived from the best of medical treatment in a first class "Water Cure."

This Institute is reputed to be the most extensive and celebrated of its kind in the world, and its success thus far, has more than met the most sanguine expectations of its founders.

TEMPERANCE. The first temperance organization was in 1517, in England, and only prohibited its members from getting drunk; no member was allowed to drink more than fourteen glasses a day! The next organization was in the year 1700, and only allowed its members to get drunk on public days. A century later, a society was formed in the State of New York, in which the penalty for getting drunk was twenty-five cents. They should have been called "Bad Templars."

—Minner's Register.
The journeymen carpenters of Fall River have adopted a resolution that they will commence work at 7 o'clock A. M. and work until 12 M.; commencing again at 1 P. M. and working as long as they can see, without any reduction of wages.

For the Patriot.

IN MEMORIAM
OF MR. CHARLES N. DITSON.

The summer has passed away, and with its departure the flowers and leaves that came with its coming,—and that for so many days past have greeted us throughout Nature's broad domain, have withered and died. The merry singing birds that have welcomed us with each morning's dawn, have taken wing for another land; and with them the spirit of one we called our friend, has also left us. Never again shall we see her bright face among us. Forever, and aye, we shall miss her light step and cheerful presence. No longer may we clasp her hand in ours, and look into the eyes that in the times gone by have greeted us. Her young life is laid low,—for her mission is ended, and she has gone home to the "Father." She was cut off from among us while life yet seemed so bright to her,—but her work was done, and we must trust and thank God that it is even so. The cares and troubles of earth-life that necessarily cling to every one, cannot now disturb her. Perchance she is taken from many a wearisome sorrow. God alone knows. Every thing that life here below could do, she has done. It is a deal to be thankful for, that her life was not a weary one, and that her last days were pleasant ones. Hardly two years ago she came among us as a wife. We remember how happy she seemed, and how she was loved and cherished by her husband. Nothing now but her beautiful memory is left,—the races upon the principles which prevail in the North, and to which the Republican party are fully committed.

For more than two hundred years the slave aristocracy of the South originated its policy, and controlled its destinies, and the result has been one of disaster and calamity. He urged, and we think truthfully, universal suffrage as the basis in contributing peace, progress and prosperity to the States and to the country,—and this he demonstrated as the key to the reconstruction scheme of Congress. There can be restoration, conciliation, friendship and prosperity for all, if the States lately in rebellion rebuild their institutions upon the principles of justice. But if they dwell upon the past they reject the precious boon now offered to them.

CARPETS AT FORTY-FIVE CENTS PER YARD. We take pleasure in calling the attention of the ladies to the advertisement of F. B. Wentworth & Co., in today's paper. We saw at their store, in Boston, one day this week, some very pretty carpeting, at forty-five cents a yard. It was warranted not to fade, and it is said to be very serviceable. Let those visiting the city call and examine.

AUSTRALIA. Forty years ago the number of horses, cattle and sheep in Australia was under 400,000; the number is now nearly 35,000,000. In 1865 the imports into the Australian colonies reached $175,000,000, and the exports $150,000,000. Within the last six years, New South Wales and Victoria yielded $750,000,000 worth of gold, and New South Wales has produced 5,000,000 tons of coal. South Australia has also, within the last ten years, exported $25,000,000 worth of copper.

EXEMPLARY. The Rochester, (N. H.) Courier says, that a young man, by the name of Walter P. Spencer, went from Boston one day last week and made a visit to Farmington and Rochester, and paid up an indebtedness of his father's of seventeen years' standing, amounting to several hundred dollars. Such instances are so rare that this deserves honorable mention.

The citizens near Hamburg, (Tenn.) have a curiosity in the shape of the earth burning where a pond formerly stood. It was set on fire by the burning of brush, and has burned down nearly twelve inches within ten days.

The coffee trade of Boston is less than one half what it was ten years ago. The pea trade has more than doubled. Found at last, a remedy that not only relieves, but cures that enemy of mankind, Consumption, as well as the numerous satellites which revolve around it, in the shape of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Indigestion, &c. The remedy we allude to is Dr. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, prepared by Seth W. Fowle & Son Boston.

Admiral Farragut saw in Sweden an entire battery of breech-loading cannons of wrought iron, taken out of a vessel sunk during the seventeenth century.

Summary Intelligence.

A telegraphic message can be sent to any part of Switzerland for ten cents after next January. The average price now is twenty cents.

The draw of the new Harlem bridge is opened and closed by water power. A minute and a half suffices for the entire operation.

Upon Mount Mica, Oxford county, Me., in an area of less than forty feet square, more than thirty different kinds of minerals have been found, some of them rare and beautiful. A small tourmaline taken from this space was valued at the London Exhibition at $15.

In Stetson, Me., is presented the remarkable phenomenon of two streams running parallel, but in opposite directions, one emptying into the Penobscot river and the other into the Kennebec.

It is said that an effort will be made to amend the national law so as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency to demand a bank statement for any week during the quarter as no.

Two gentlemen of New York have purchased a five hundred acre tract in Pennsylvania for the cultivation of the water-gourd or chuckerberry.

It costs $1,000,000 to collect in New York the news of the globe, and as no one journal can afford this expense, the leading newspapers of the United States combined for that purpose.

The Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States has twelve hundred churches with a membership of eight hundred and fifty thousand.

The female college at Bordertown N. J., has a "department of washing."

We call attention to card in the column of New Advertisements, headed Best Newspapers, and would recommend it to the attention of any one interested in the subject of advertising. They should read it and send for a circular giving particulars, if only to learn how much a well regulated system can be made to increase the amount of advertising to be obtained for a fixed sum of money. The parties who thus invite attention to their facilities (Messrs. G. P. Rowell & Co. 40 Park Row, N. Y.) are known to us as responsible business men, with whom it is a pleasure to deal.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. The November number is remarkably good. The Steel Engraving "Learning to Sew" is a sweet, quiet home picture. The Fashion Plate is stylish and gay; nothing of the kind in the country is worth looking at compared with it. The Wood Cuts lead off with some captivating skating costumes, and the literary matters are uncommonly rich.

Great inducements in the way of Premiums, &c., are promised to new subscribers, and our readers should send for a sample copy, containing all these liberal offers. Sample copies sent for fifteen cents.

Price (with engravings) $2.50 a year. Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Selected Poetry.

OCTOBER.

Solemn, yet beautiful to view,
Month of my heart, thou darrest here,
With serene and faded leaves to strew
The summer's melancholy bier:
The moaning of the winds I hear,
As the red sunset dies afar,
And hark of purple clouds appear,
Obscuring every western star.
Thou solemn month! I hear thy voice,
It tells my soul of other days,
When but to live was to rejoice,
When earth was lovely to my gaze.
O, visions bright! O, blessed hours!
Where are those living raptures now?
I ask my spirit's wasted power,
I ask my pale and fevered brow.
Alas! for Time and Death and Care,
What gloom about our way they fling,
Like clouds in Autumn's gusty air,
The burial pageant of the Spring.
The dreams that each succeeding year
Seemed bathed in hues of living pride,
At last, like withered leaves appear,
And sleep in darkness, side by side.

Farmers' Department.

PLANTING THE PINE.

B. F. Cutter of Pelham, an observer of Nature's works, says that a crop of well filled cones occurs only once in four or five years—that this season they are very abundant and productive of many seeds. Like the seeds of other trees and of grains generally, they should be gathered before they are dead ripe, as soon as practicable after they are matured in size and begin to ripen. They should not be allowed to fall from the trees in consequence of their over ripeness, if they are to be used for growing a forest. Every one has noticed how quickly light land comes up to pines, and how rapidly they grow. Now the experiment is easily tried. Let the cones be gathered and kept safe from mice, too much heat and moisture, and before the ground closes up—or if the farmer prefers, in the spring time—let him scatter the seeds about and cover them by the use of the harrow, or by turning a light furrow upon them. The first season will bring them up thick and vigorous, and the only care they need will be protection from the feet and horns of the cattle. Twenty years will show a heavy growth, and furnish some trees fit for building timber.
Who will try the experiment?—Manchester Mirror.

PREVENTION AND CURE OF LICE.

It is well known that cattle are not affected with lice in the summer season, when lying upon the ground, and frequently pawing in the dirt; while bulls that are always pawing in the ground and sand are very rarely troubled with the pest. This fact confirms the utility of dirt or sand. Every farmer or cattle keeper should provide an ample supply of fine sand in season to have it thoroughly dry before freezing weather, and place it in some dry and convenient spot, and whenever the stables are cleaned, sprinkle the floors with a few shovelfuls. The dry sand will work its way among the hairs of the animals, proving a certain preventive of vermin, and even driving them away, or destroying them after they have made lodgment. Sand will also be valuable for absorbing the liquid, and a safeguard against slippery floors. We have tried sand and know its efficacy. When cattle are badly afflicted, it may be sometimes necessary for their speedy removal, to wash the animal with a decoction of tobacco (not too strong) boiled in chamber-lye; or by applying lard upon the affected parts. Unguentum, and like violent poisons, are dangerous, and should be avoided; but will usually effect a cure. It may be necessary sometimes to sprinkle a little dry sand along the back of the animal. Sand is cheap and safe. Try it.—Horace Thayer, in American Farmer.

Interesting Selections.

They have a patriarch in Taunton, Mass., who raised a flock of wild ducks from a pond, when he took aim at them with his gun and fired. They flew away with much clamor, and, surprised to find that none of them dropped, he examined the field of battle. He picked up four bushels of eggs. There is a touch of pathos in the old man's voice, as he adds, "I fired too low."

Women have a much nicer sense of the beautiful than men. They are, by far, the safer umpires in the matters of propriety and grace. A mere school-girl will be thinking and writing about the beauty of birds and flowers, while her brother is robbing the nests and destroying the flowers.

The base ball fever is widely spread. A little six-year-old was sitting in repose upon the parlor steps, with a base ball in his hand, gazing intently at the moon. "Pa," he suddenly spoke, "is there only one man in the moon?" "That's the tradition, my son; the man in the moon was the only inhabitant of that bright world we have ever heard of." After a moment's pause he remarked, with a sigh—"He must be lonesome, pa, and no one to play base ball with."

REPROOF. When the most insignificant person tells us we are wrong, we ought to listen and to examine ourselves, and see if it be so. Let us believe it possible that we may be in error when any one thinks we are.

And the above reward will also be paid to

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

TO OUR PATRIOTIC RULERS.
Lines on seeing a gathering of the Old Soldiers of 1812-15.

BY E. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

I saw the time-worn veterans stand,
Scarce noticed 'midst the crowd;
I saw them when a youthful band,
They march'd to guard their native land,
Each his own rifle in his hand—
No bounty then allowed.

They fought their country's battles well,
The boasting foe they met;
Before them Europe's conquerors fell,
And history will not fail to tell
What Britons can't forget:

That man to man, and ship to ship,
We beat them on the wave;
They won't forget the Yankee grip,
That made the vaunted Red Cross dip,
Hard lesson for the brave.

On land we fought our valiant foes,
And drove them from our shore;
We chid'd the laze lords from their bow,
They felt our force—Britannia knows—
She ventures here no more.

Our country owes an unpaid debt,
To those who for her fought;
Ungrateful men will you forget
The blessings you are reaping yet,
By others' perils bought.

And can you pass these heroes by These relics old and worn;
Or by unkind neglect imply,
Their patriot service you deny,
And treat their claims with scorn.

Ah, God forgive you—these old men,
Will soon be in their graves;
Then you may realize that then,
They stilled in the lion's den,
The harp that ne'er will sound again,
Britannia rules the wave.

Britannia rules the waves no more,
Columbia's valiant braves
The sceptre from the tyrant tore,
The stripes and stars in triumph bore,
And freed the Ocean waves.

Take off your hats, irreverent men,
The vet'ran's claim allow;
Had they not fought, you now had been Kidnapped and rob'd as you were then,
By an insulting foe.

Again may sound the "armory cry,
To arms, to arms, again;
But if you pass the Fathers by,
With cold neglect and scornful eye,
You'll call their sons in vain.

GINGER TIPS. One cupful of molasses, half a cup of sugar, one spoonful of ginger, one cupful of butter, half a cupful of sour milk, two teaspoonfuls of saleratus dissolved in boiling water and stirred in after the flour. Make it just stiff enough to roll very thin; cut in small cakes and bake quick.

Quilp, who has been reflecting of the very slender frame-work with which
a fashionable lady often supports the ap-

A helping word to one in trouble

Most of the tooth-powders sold

it gives the teeth a clean, white surface,
does it at the expense of some of the nat-

perfumed, is the best possible application. We would not recommend even the finest charcoal, or prepared chalk, for though inert, they wear upon the enamel.

Miscellany.

ADOPTED.

"It is very strange," muttered Blanche Penroy, slowly weaving together the wreath of scarlet autumn leaves with which she was decorating her broad brimmed straw hat.

She made a beautiful picture, sitting there all alone in the mellow glow and color of the October woods, the crimson shawl drooping from her shoulders, and
the sunshine lighting up her bright auburn curls with glittering threads of gold,
while upon the fallen tree trunk that formed
her impromptu seat, lay a tiny bunch of grass and autumnal flowers. She was transparently fair, with purple tangles of veins in each waxen cheek, and a faint
pink bloom on her cheeks, while her eyes,
large and brown, seemed to look at you with the grave, tender expression of an infant.

"Yes, it is very strange," went on Miss Penroy, musing within herself. "I know
so little about him—I have only known him ten days—yet when he spoke about leaving Elm Point last night, it seemed as if all the sunshine were going out of the world for me. O, Blanche! naughty, naughty little Blanche!" she added, leaning forward, and apostrophizing the fair
face mirrored in the glass stream at her feet. "Is it possible that you've allowed yourself to fall in love with that tall, black-eyed young Southerner? ten days ago I knew never seen him—and now!"

The rose mounted up into her cheek as she wondered within herself whether Mr.
Evering cared for her.

"I wish I knew!" she uttered aloud.
"Knew what?" demanded a calm voice, and Mr. Gilbert Evering took up the bunch of grasses on the log, and coolly seated himself beside her, a straight,
handsome man, with brilliant dark eyes,
rather irregular features, and a deep color
glowing through his olive skin.

Blanche demurely looked up at him—
she was not to be taken by storm thus easily.

"Whether it would rain to-morrow for our picnic; I want to wear my white India muslin."

"O—the picnic; I had forgotten that when I spoke of leaving to-morrow. Of course, though my presence or absence
will make no great difference."

Blanche was silent. Somehow that scarlet and brown spotted maple leaf reflected a great deal of adjustment in the ribbon of her hat.

"Just as you please, Mr. Evering, of course."

"No; just as somebody else pleases.
Yes or no; I I forewarn you, the yes
means a great deal."

"How much does it mean?" questioned
Blanche, half archly, half timorously.
"Everything!"

"Then you may stay."

"My Blanche—my little white daisy!"
he whispered, bending his stately head over the slender hand that lay on the autumn leaves. And Blanche felt that in the golden stillness of that October dell she had turned a new page in the book of her life!

She was very, very happy, and all that day she seemed to be walking through the bright mysteries of a dream. But with the morning came other feelings,
alas! that shadows should always follow
sunshine in this world of ours.

"I'm not disposed to be unreasonably Blanche," said Gilbert, in a whisper, as he arranged her white lace shawl for her,
amid the tumult of the picnic ground,
but I do think you've waltzed quite often enough with that confounded puppy Birmingham!"

"Jealous already, Gilbert?" taunted
the girl, flushed and rosy with the triumphs of her beauty, and the irresistible instincts of coquetry. She colored crimson.

"Of course you will do as you please,
Blanche; only I warn you, it's only a choice between Walter Birmingham and me. You dance with him again at your own risk!"

At the same instant young Birmingham
came up.

"May I have the pleasure of this polka with you, Miss Penroy?"

And Blanche, defiant and wilful, and a little piqued, answered:

"Yes."

She glided away with her plump hand
on Gilbert Birmingham's shoulder. Gilbert had no business to be so unreasonably.

His grave, stern face, rather startled her
as she came once more to the rustic seat
of twisted boughs, when the string-band music was silent, and Mr. Birmingham had gone to bring her a glass of iced lemonade.

"Gilbert! why do you look so cross?"
"Because I have reason. I am sorry
you pay so little attention to my wishes, Miss Penroy!"

"You are beginning to dictate early,
sir!"

"Have I not the right?"

"Nothing of the sort, Mr. Evering."
"Be it so, Blanche," he said in a voice
that betrayed how deep the arrow rankled
in his bosom. "I give up the right now and henceforward."

Blanche was startled. She would have said more, but Walter Birmingham was advancing towards her, and when next she had leisure to look round, Gilbert was gone from her side.

"What have I done?" she thought, in dismay. "I'll see him this evening, and concoct him into good humor once more.
He surely can't be vexed at me for an idle word like that."

"Ah, little Blanche, it is not the well-considered sentence that does all the harm
in this world—it is the idle word!"

"Such a charming day as we have had,
Mrs. Traine," said Blanche, as she coming up the steps of the hotel piazza, as smiling and radiant as if the warm, remorse,
was not gnawing at her heart.

"That, of course," said the blooming matron, who was reading in an easy chair
under the shadow of the vines. "But what sent Mr. Evering away in such a hurry?"

"Sent him away?"

"Yes, by the evening train. He came home, packed his things, and drove away
as if there was not a moment to lose. I am very sorry; we shall miss him so much."

Blanche went slowly up stairs and sat down by her window, looking out at the purple glow of the evening landscape as if it were a featureless blank. So he was really gone away; and by her own folly
she had lost the priceless treasure of Gilbert Evering's love.

"And I cannot even write to him, for
I do not know his address," she thought,
with clasped hands and tearful eyes.
"Well, it is my own fault, and I must abide the consequences as best I may."

Blanche Penroy went home from the gay summer lounging place a sadder and wiser woman; and the November mists drooping o'er the brick-and-mortar wilderness of her New York home, had never seemed half so dreary to her as they seem now.

"I suppose I shall be an old maid,"
thought Blanche, walking up and down
the fire-light darkness of her twilight drawing rooms, with her dimpled hands clasped behind her waist. "I never cared for any one now as I cared for—Gilbert;
and I dare say I shall keep a cat, and grow fond of green tea, and scandal, and sewing circles! Ah, well-a-day! life cannot last forever!"

A dreary comfort that for a girl of nineteen summers.

She rang the bell with an impatient
jerk.

"Are there any letters, Sanderson?"

"One, ma'am; it came by the evening post about five minutes ago."

"Light the gas, then, and give it to me."
Blanche sat down by the fire and opened
the letter, suppressing a yawn.

Black-edged—and black-sealed! So poor Mrs. Marchmont was at last!

It was from the executors of Miss Penroy's cousin, formally and briefly announce-ing her death, which had taken place in consequence of the West India Islands, some months since; but of which the "melancholy news," as the letter ran, had only just been received. It was not entirely unexpected, as Mrs. Marchmont had for some years been slowly fading out of the world, a victim to hereditary consumption.

"Leaving one child, a son," slowly repeated Blanche, leaning her cheek on her hand, and looking down into the fiery quiver of the white hot coals. "Poor little fellow, he must feel nearly as desolate and alone as I do. Only I have one advantage—I have at least sufficiency
of this world's goods; and this orphaned child must be thrown penniless and alone
on his own resources, for if I remember aright, Mrs. Marchmont forfeited all the wealth of her first marriage by her second alliance with the poverty-stricken lawyer
whose death plunged her into much bitter mourning. That was a genuine love-match, yet how much grief and trouble it brought, leaving one child—a son!"

Why should I not adopt the stray waif,
and make it the business of my life to cherish and comfort him? I have no object in existence; here is one that Providence itself seems to have pointed out to me."

Once more she rang the bell, with fresh color flowing in her cheeks, and a new light in her eyes.

"Bring in my writing-case immediately,
Sanderson, and get ready to take a letter
to the post for me as soon as possible."

The old servant obeyed, wondering at his mistress's unwonted energy, and yet
well pleased to see some of her old animation returning.

"She do look more like herself to-night,
do Miss Blanche, than she has for a long time," he said to his housekeeper, as he came down, after obeying her summons.

"I only wish Miss Blanche would take a finer to some nice, proper-behaved young man; it don't seem now right that she should live all by herself in this big house,
so forlorn-like."

The housekeeper nodded sagaciously to all of Mr. Sanderson's propositions. She fully agreed with him: "Only Miss Blanche was too wilful ever to hear a word of advice."

It was a very simple and unconscious letter that Blanche Penroy wrote to her
"far-away cousin's" executors, from the fulness of her heart:

"I never shall marry now, and it seems to become my plainly indicated duty to undertake the care of this orphan child of Mrs. Marchmont's. With your approval, therefore, I propose to adopt him, and endeavor, as far as in my power, to supply
the place of his lost mother. You may at first deem me rather young to undertake so grave and serious a responsibility;

but I was nineteen last month, and I am very, very much older in my thought and feeling than my years. Of course, at my death, the child will inherit the property
which was left to me by my deceased parents."

"I hope my cousin's executors are like
the nice, white-headed old lawyers one reads about in novels," said Blanche to herself as she folded the little perfumed
sheet of pink paper, "and not cross old fudges, talking of 'expediency' and 'appropriateness'; for I do want somebody to love and care for; and somehow I've a premonition that this little fellow will be nice and rosy and lovable. I think I will teach him to call me 'Auntie.'"

Just a week subsequently, a prim, legal note was received from Messrs. Alias and Corpus, the deceased lady's executors,
stating that "they saw no valid objection
to Miss Penroy's very laudable project,
and that, in accordance thereto, the child
of the late Mrs. Marchmont would arrive at Miss Penroy's residence on the following Saturday night."

"Saturday night—and this is Friday," ejaculated Blanche, with a new brightness dancing in her hazel eyes. "O, how glad I shall be! Sanderson, tell Mrs.
Brown to have the blue room fitted up immediately for Master Marchmont, and you had better go yourself to the depot
with the carriage, at five to-morrow afternoon, to meet him."

"Yes, ma'am," said Sanderson, stolidly.
The apparition of a great unruly boy,
tramping with muddy boots on the velvet
carpets, and haunting the house with balls
and marbles, and long-splitting hallies,
did not possess the charm to Sanderson's
eyes that it seemed to for his mistress.

And even patient Mrs. Brown remarked with a species of exasperation that "she didn't see what put this freak into Miss Blanche's head."

Saturday was a day of hail and tempest, and softly falling snow, and by five o'clock the drawing-rooms were lighted,
and the crimson silk curtains closely
drawn, to exclude the stormy darkness without. Six times within the last fifteen minutes had Blanche Penroy looked at her watch, as she stood by the fire waiting to hear the returning carriage wheels.

She was dressed in a rich China blue silk dress, with pearl pin and ear drops, and a little point lace at her throat and wrists,
and the color in her cheeks, and the golden glimmer in her bright hair, made her, unconsciously, very fair to look upon.

"O, I hope—I hope he will like me,"
thought Blanche, with that instinctive yearning for love, that comes to every woman's heart, as the door opened.

"Here's the young gentleman, Miss,"
said Sanderson, with a half-suppressed
sneer between a laugh and a snort.

But instead of a child of seven or eight years old, a tall apparition stalked in, coming over six feet high, with a monstrous, and most hazel eyes brimming over with mirth. For an instant Blanche stared at him as if she could hardly credit the evidence of her own senses.

"Gilbert!"

"Exactly. You wanted to adopt me, and here I am."

No, but, Blanche!"

"Yes, but, Blanche!"

termine the complexion of his character. On the contrary, if he loves purity, modesty, truth—draw out his affections—his heart and draw out his affections—we are satisfied that he is an upright man.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1867.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

IMPROVEMENTS ON HANCOCK ST.—The Goodnow building, corner of Hancock and Granite streets, which has been undergoing repairs for several months looks unusually well, and is one of the largest, most convenient, and we might say the handsomest in the town. It will probably rent for near one thousand dollars per annum.

The old stable near Mr. Clapp's store, belonging until recently to the Brigham estate, is to be torn down. Col. Packard, its present owner, intends to improve the ground as a nursery and garden. Mr. John Hall thinks of building a new lively stable in the "Hollow," on a piece of land owned by Mr. Hall, where the paint shop was destroyed by fire.

Messrs. Tirrell & Sons are making preparations to erect a large building near their present wheelwright shop, which they intend to remove. The new building is to be very commodious, and will accommodate the carpenters, painters and harness makers employed in their carriage manufactory.

E. H. UNAC. This gentleman who is to speak upon Temperance in the Town Hall to-morrow evening, was formerly a Lawyer in New York City. He is a young Irishman of more than ordinary ability, and is lecturing with great acceptance. Like John B. Gough, he had sunk low in degradation resulting from intemperance, and like him has reformed and possesses some of his fire and eloquence. With such a speaker together with the attractions of good music, we predict a full house.

THANKSGIVING DAY. His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Council, has appointed Thursday, 28th of November, to be a day of Public Thanksgiving.

At the Democratic and Conservative Convention for the Second Congressional District, Jeffrey R. Brackett was nominated by acclamation. This District includes parts of Norfolk, Plymouth, and Bristol Counties.

The Republicans have nominated Mr. Charles Endicott, of Canton. The contest will be between the friends of Mr. Brackett and those of Mr. Endicott.

BENZINE EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE. On Thursday evening the 17th ult., at Miss Caroline Ware, housekeeper for Mr. Wm. Monroe, 106 Joylston street, Boston, assisted by Miss Weltz, was engaged in cleaning some furniture with benzine, the gas from the dangerous liquid took fire, communicated with the can, and in a moment the clothing of the two women was in flames, as well as every inflammable article in the room. An alarm was given and assistance was quickly at hand, but Miss Ware was dead before she could be reached, and Miss Weltz so badly burned that she died at the hospital the next morning. The damage to the house was about $1000. Miss Ware was about 40 years of age, and formerly resided in this town, and was dearly beloved by a large circle of friends.

SAD CATASTROPHE. A terrible accident took place at the Hoosac Tunnel on Saturday last week, by which thirteen men were either killed outright or suffocated to death. The engine works at the mouth of the shaft exploded and burned, falling down the shaft and burying the whole gang of workmen at the bottom. The bodies at last accounts, had not been recovered.

RETIREMENT. Gen. Grant issued another order looking to retirement. He directs that all private buildings occupied in Washington by any bureau of the War Department be vacated at once and turned over to their owners. This will effect a saving of many thousands of dollars per month. Since General Grant took hold of the War Department the retirement expenses has been at the rate of five million per annum.

BANKRUPTCY. The thirty-third section of the Bankrupt Law, passed at the last session of Congress, provides that "in all proceedings in bankruptcy commenced after one year from the time this act shall go into operation, no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets do not pay fifty per centum of the claims against his estate, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors who have proved their claims is filed in the case at or before the time of application for discharge. Persons, as well as corporations, who contemplate a bankruptcy who apply after next March, will, as a matter of course, be proven in terms of the law.

The new Silver Tips recently introduced by the American Shoe Tip Company are decidedly ornamental. A metal tip adapted to first-class shoes has long been needed, for children will wear holes in the toes of even the highest cost shoes in a few days unless protected by metal tips.—Boston Journal.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, OCT. 24, 1867.

A Quiet week.—The State Election.—License vs. Prohibition.—The matter considered.—Finance.—Plan of lessening Taxes, and getting out of debt.—An Elusive period.

Since my last communication to the columns of the Patriot, Boston has had a quiet and unexcited week. Looking at Washington, the American people are waiting for the meeting of Congress with patience and hope, that President Johnson will so far harmonize with the national legislature as to prevent any obstacles to the reconstruction scheme. Great doubt now exists whether any action will be taken by Congress on the subject of impeachment. We have always expressed our hope that our countrymen may never witness such a spectacle.

Active preliminary measures are taking place daily for the approaching State election in Massachusetts, and a large vote will be thrown on Tuesday the fifth of November next. The important question is License vs. Prohibition. On this abstract issue, apart from national matters a powerful party exists on both sides, combined with an honest difference of opinion. The premises taken by those opposed to License, are, that the present Prohibitory Liquor Law is morally, legally and practically right, and should not be repealed. That there had been no more violent assault on human rights, on the wealth of the community, than the assault made by the sale of intoxicating liquors. That without Prohibition intemperance would do its perfect work of demoralization. Although a profoundly argumentative question, in which each party should be supposed equally honest in opinion, a logical rule taught in all schools of learning, yet the opponents of License have departed from that rule in their unmeasured abuse on the advocates of stringent regulation. On the other hand, the arguments against Prohibition, are, that the law is morally wrong, because it is in opposition to the sentiment of the mass of the people. That it tends to make people dishonest, creating one class of opinions for public, and another for private use; that the law is immoral in its effect on the community, inasmuch as its friends declare it working beautifully, when in point of fact, the contrary is true. That the law is an outrage on private rights, and our best druggists report in consequence, an increased sale of laudanum, morphine and opium. That the law has a demoralizing effect on politics, and that it had demoralized the Republican party to that extent, that Senator Wilson has stated that he would vote for a Democratic temperance man rather than a Republican. Thus placing the temperance question not on moral, but political grounds. And the question of temperance, which never should have entered the arena of political strife has now embarked on that uncertain sea. The arguments in favor of License preponderate. The Prohibitory Law has worked and is working bad for the cause of moral reform.—It should be repealed.

The financial policy of the United States being the hinge on which all business interests turn, is attracting a deep interest in the public mind. That skillful pilot in money matters, Secretary McCulloch, informs us, that with the funds in hand, and the surplus revenue of this autumn and the ensuing year, two hundred and forty million dollars of our floating debt can be paid; thus reducing it to two thousand million, bearing interest—and the interest itself to one hundred and fifteen million, and in four years more, to ninety-seven million. As the debt reduces, by a sinking fund of $50,000,000 per year, which he says can be done, our onerous taxes on incomes and the necessities of life, will gradually slide off. We can return to specie payment in 1868; and within twenty-five years, pay every dollar of our national debt. With the incubus on the hearts of business men, these are encouraging premises.

The day is not far distant when the majority of the people in want of musical instruments for their homes, will not rest satisfied with the mere testimony of advertisements, but their purchases will be based upon the actual musical merits and mechanical excellencies of the desired instruments. Messrs S. D. & H. W. Smith, of Boston, manufacturers of the AMERICAN ORGANS, have been favored with such a class of customers, and have thus been enabled to build up an immense trade, notwithstanding the great competition which exists in this particular branch of business.—Musical Review.

THE NEW POST OFFICE IN BOSTON. The lot for the new Post Office will front on Devonshire street, which will be widened to fifty feet, and extend from Milk to Water streets. The site will embrace an area of 25,000 feet.

A lady of Chicago named McCarty, who had been collecting the rent of her numerous tenements, recently was garrotted and robbed of about $4000 on the platform of a horse car which was about to enter. It was one of the boldest pieces of villainy ever recorded, as the robbery was committed in a public street, in broad daylight, and the car was full of passengers.

The following, from the latest authority, may be of interest to our lady readers who frequently go out to make calls. "A plain card denotes a passing call; the lower right hand corner turned down, a visit; left hand lower corner, condolence; right hand corner, business; left hand upper corner, adieu."

TAKING MEDICINE to cure diseases occasioned by a deficiency of Iron in the blood, without resting it to the system, is like trying to repair a building when the foundation is gone. The Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron) supplies this deficiency and builds up an iron constitution.

The Temperance Lecture, Sunday Evening.

Moral and religious influences of Prohibition in contrast with the disastrous effects of License, was the theme of the address.

After stating the perfect harmony between the pulpit and temperance, Mr. Aldrich proceeded to examine the question of Prohibition in its bearing on the great middle class—the laborers—the yeomanry of the land; barely touching upon the baleful effects of intemperance, by a graphic recital of the last moments of the young and gifted James M. McDougal, lured to a drunkard's miserable grave by the demon, whose power Prohibition only can cripple.

The alliance of the voluptuous and the vicious; the fact that eight presidents of prominent New England colleges, are soon to meet to deliberate on measures to save their most brilliant and promising students from destruction by the cup; the terrible fraud on the government in the matter of revenue, sufficient to pay the passing interest on the public debt; the significant fact that an anti-Prohibition organization now existing, has taken to itself the title and debris of society—the hangers-on, and abettors of the prize ring and the gaming saloon; a tendency to the bar of public examination; the sacred duty of every freeman, second to no other; to use aright the magic power of the ballot, and either cast a vote, or stand alone, even in defeat, rather than elect a man who is pledged, or who is in danger of being pledged to License,—were some of the topics, able and eloquently discussed during the hour which was occupied.

The audience was attentive, and the words spoken were timely for those who need a rallying cry at the coming election, to stand by those principles which have ever given Massachusetts a position at the front.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

This is the ninth day of mild, summer-like weather, quite favorable for travel, especially for pedestrian excursions about this city of magnificent distances. Arriving here on Friday last, my first visit was made to the thirty-seventh exhibition of THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE, Armory Hall, Fifteenth street. The crowd was large, but neither on this nor subsequent visits has the rush equalled that of the second exhibition, when the editor of the Commercial Advertiser said he saw "a lady of large dimensions squeezed as flat as a pancake." The Pneumatic Railway attracts great attention. With others I was whisked through the big tube and back last evening. It was rather an enjoyable trip, but to put on a speed of a hundred miles an hour would change the thing entirely.

The "Ocellus" interested me as much as anything. The piece of musical mechanism combines a full band of string, reed, wind and percussion instruments, and plays with automatic exactness when wound up. With the eyes closed you can hardly divest yourself of the idea that really a brass band is passing. The Art Gallery has treasures from all lands.—chiefly, of course, the products of New England genius and industry. Familiar faces of some Bostonians are represented by Notman's wonderful photographs: Scenes at the White Mountains are called to mind by the exquisite chromos of Mr. Prang after Breiter's paintings, and a little picture by Bierstadt, perhaps 10x12 inches, is marked $1000.

ARTISTS AND PUBLISHERS are not idle, although business is quiet. Mr. Riddle, the celebrated Brooklyn artist, allowed me to examine his last great work, "Death Bed of Lincoln,"—soon to be published. F. B. Carpenter informs me that he is to paint a full length portrait of our lamented President, for the city of Chicago; also portraits of Horace Greeley and Rev. Dr. P. Thompson. Bradford and Wenzler are away. Carmelene's last work is the "Wicket Gate" at Bunyan Hall, a part of a magnificent series, illustrating the Pilgrim's Progress now exhibiting there. There is nothing of the kind equal to it in the world, and no one ought to fail to see it, when visiting New York. An hour was pleasantly spent at Charles Scribner & Co's. spacious publishing house, 654 Broadway, and some idea gained of the extensive business carried on by this well-known firm. Their issues are mainly educational, theological or historical, with very few sensational or cheap literature. The junior partner, A. J. Peabody Esq. nephew of the honored banker of that name, is a gentleman of culture and ability, and his courteous attentions are gratefully acknowledged.

Hurd & Houghton attend to the department of belletrists, and Carter Brothers mainly to juvenile and religious works. Of a trip to Greenwood and Central Park I have not space at present to write.

E. F. T. New York, October 22d, 1867.

For the Patriot.

The Temperance campaign which was announced to open so attractively, seems to have been suspended. Dr. Miner, who was unable to attend on the first evening, can probably now favor us; it is of the first importance, that until election, the best speakers should address the voters of this town, so that, as Gen. Wilson says, "The issue should be fairly met at the polls." It is for the progressive party, (that is the Republicans) to see that the good work of the last Legislature is still pushed onward.

INTERESTING TO RUNAWAY LOVERS. The Fort Valley Gazette says: "Young people desiring to run away and marry, will find this place to afford all the facilities necessary for a speedy union. Our depot agent is an ordained minister; our hotel keeper prepares a wedding feast three times a day, and half a dozen trains leave at different intervals for different destinations."

TO "G." AND OTHER GRUMBLERS.

To the Editor of the Patriot:—

I have been much amused for a few weeks past, at reading in your paper the complaints of certain individuals, who have, or who imagine they have, some grievous fault to find with our Town officials, and who prefer to parade their complaints before the public through your columns, instead of what seems to me to be the better way, of calling in person upon the authorities and stating their grievances, with a request that they shall receive proper attention. In your issue of last Saturday, a "werry old kistick" article appeared, directed at the head of the young and modest Surveyor of Highways for the Centre District. We know not what effect the shot will have upon him, but from our knowledge of him, we judge he is not afraid of paper bullets, and that the author, who appears to be very green in matters relative to town affairs in Massachusetts,—(perhaps he has recently emigrated from New York or some of the Western States where the office of Street Commissioner is known to exist)—or perhaps he has a "kiss and kart" to let, and takes this method of advertising them, to save the printer's fee, and would meet with better success, and perhaps have secured a contract, if he had called upon the Surveyor and convinced him that he could have furnished horses, carts and men, in sufficient numbers to have levelled that "steep hill" in a less time than the force now employed.

HEROISM OF WOMEN.

October 21st. This is the thirty-second anniversary of the pro-Slavery mob in Boston. One of the "respectable ladies" of that time said it differed somewhat from common mobs, its leaders were "gentlemen of property and standing."

The immediate results of this mob, was the routing of some thirty or forty ladies; the destruction of one panel-door; a sign board six feet long, and dragging Mr. Garrison through some of the streets of Boston. Its more remote results, were the encouraging and deceiving the South. The Boston Female anti-Slavery Society having been denied the use of several other places, met that day in a small hall, No. 46 Washington street. Mr. Garrison's office was in the same building. The street was densely packed, and the outcries of the mob was various.

The ladies meeting had been called to order. The rioters were pressing up the stair-way, while the President, Miss Mary Parker, was engaged in prayer, in a strong clear voice. One who was present, said, "I shall never forget it. It was thrilling beyond description; evincing the utmost trust in God, and a complete serenity of soul, as she thanked God, that while there were many to molest, there were none to make afraid."

The Mayor of the city soon after entered the hall, and received some important suggestions from the ladies in reference to his civil duties. The following conversation took place:

Mayor. "Go home ladies, go home." President. "What renders it necessary that we should go home?" Mayor. "I am Mayor of the city and I cannot now explain,—but will call upon you this evening."

President. "If the ladies will be seated we will take the sense of the meeting?" Mayor. "Don't stop ladies, go home." President. "Will the ladies listen to a letter addressed to the Society by Francis Jackson, Esq.?"

Mayor. "Ladies, do you wish to see a scene of bloodshed and confusion, if not, go home."

One of the Ladies. "Mr. Lyman, your personal friends are the instigators of the mob, have you ever seen your personal influence with them?"

Mayor. "I have no personal friends; I am merely an official. Indeed, ladies, you must retire. It is dangerous to remain."

Lady. "If this is the last bulwark of freedom, we may as well die here as anywhere."

Wendell Phillips said, alluding to this event, "There is nothing lower than that in the history of the Long Parliament or of the Roman Senate."

After transacting some business, the ladies, in a calm and dignified manner, retired.

Summary Intelligence.

On the first of November some $23,000,000 in gold will be paid by the Government on account of interest. With exchange so decidedly in our favor, it would seem that the paying out so large an amount of gold would have a marked effect on the market. But rumors of war exert a great influence on the price of "hard cash."

Trinity Church spire, which is already one of the most prominent in New York, is to be raised 90 feet.

A birch bark canoe sixteen feet long and four wide, made out of a single sheet, is soon to be launched on Central Park.

A man in Connecticut recently had five men mowing in his hay field at one time, the youngest of whom was 64 and the oldest 80 years of age.

The estimated crop of sugar in Louisiana this year is $100,000,000, heads,—about one-fourth the crop before the war.

The amount of tobacco shipped from Richmond during the month of September was over one million pounds, on which a tax of half a million dollars was paid.

The nearest tree to Fort Sedgewick, Colorado, was a solitary one forty-five miles distant. Fire-wood costs $33 per cord at the fort.

The population of San Francisco is now 130,000, an increase of 74,000 in seven years.

THE ESTATE LEFT BY PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

An inventory of President Lincoln's estate filed in the courts of Sangamon county, Ill., on the 29th of November, 1866, shows that he had $79,482 invested in Government securities at the time of his death, which, with other sums, notes of hand and real estate in his possession, would swell the amount of his property to $85,000. This, with the $25,000 voted his widow by Congress, makes the total foot up to $110,000. It would seem from this that it was not absolutely necessary that Mrs. L. should sell her cast off finery to save herself from starvation.

It has been suggested that the art of writing telegrams should be taught in the public schools.

Deafness, Catarrh,

Consumption and Cancer Cured.

A Treatise on Deafness, Catarrh, Consumption and Cancer. By a Pupil of the Academy of Medicine, Paris. Sent by mail for 10 cents. Letter from Robert M. Sherry, D.D., LL.D., Grand Juror of Grand Jurisdiction of U.S., and Editor of the National Freeman.

New York, Sept. 17, 1867.—Dr. STEWART, was in charge of Grand Jurisdiction, Alexandria, Va., during the war. Frequently, almost daily, for months, he visited this Hospital, and had every means of knowledge, his reputation for Efficiency and Skill. It was of the most creditable character, and his success in the treatment of patients was remarkable.—Hunt, Baltimore.

It fits into the ear, is not perceptible, remains empty, moves in the head, and enables deaf persons to hear distinctly at church and public assemblies. This treatment will often produce results almost miraculous, in cases of long standing deafness. It will relieve in a short time. It may be adjusted with the case of spectacles.

Dr. STEWART will be professionally at 31 East Washington Place, University Buildings, N. Y., daily, 10 to 12 except Tuesdays, when he will be at his rooms 1012 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

For the Patriot.

LOOK OUT FOR BREAKERS.
TUNE—Yankee Doodle.
Look out if Democrats should win,
As Uncle Jim supposes,
I guess you'll see some rum and gin,
Black eyes and bloody noses,
Chorus.—Look about and show your light;
If you fail to guard the right,
And see what folks are doing;
If you fail to guard the right,
The land may go to ruin.

The P. L. L.'s and Demo's join'd,
Are getting Alto'scenty,
And pretty soon I guess you'll find,
That drunken fools are plenty.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

And father'll have his jug again,
And when he takes a damped
I guess that you and I and Jane,
Will have to cut and scamper.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

I wonder what the people think,
To favor rum's revenge;
I wish the d— had the drink,
I guess 'twas his contrivance.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

Who wants to see his father drunk,
His uncle, or his brother?
Some guzzle just to raise their spunk,
To pamper one another.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

And mother'll have to catch it, too,
If father takes to winking;
He used to beat her black and blue;
When he came home from drinking;
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

Oh, what's got into all the men?
I think they must be crazy;
I wish the women'd vote, and then
Send off the drunk and lazy.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

I'm sure the women wouldn't vote,
To have the drink so handy,
To see the sons on whom they dote,
Made brutes by rum and brandy.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

I wish the men would show their sense,
And let their conscience rule them,
And not be guiled by false pretence,
To let the rummies fool them.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

If fathers had about the drink,
And give it to their laddies,
It won't be very long I think,
Before they'll beat their daddies.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

The lawyers will be growing fat,
The constables upon us,
When there's a brick in every hat,
And a stone in every shoe.
Chorus.—Look about and show your light, &c.

Interesting Selections.

Nothing is more common than to talk of a friend; nothing is more difficult than to find one; nothing more rare than to improve one as we ought.

"An honest old lady in the country,
when told of her husband's death, exclaimed:
"Well, I do declare, our troubles never came alone! I didn't a week since I lost my best hen, and now Mr. Hopper has gone too, poor man!"

It is a singular fact that ladies who know how to preserve everything else, can't preserve their tempers. Yet it may easily be done on the self-sealing principle. It is only to keep the mouth of the vessel tightly closed.

"My young friends," said a college President, in his bacchante address to the seniors, "God calls very few of us to be artists, philosophers, poets, or distinguished men of any kind; but he calls every one of us to do our duty."

It is a mistake to suppose that girls now-a-days knead dough as much as they need husbands.

"We see," says Swift, in one of his most sarcastic moods, "what God thinks of riches by the people He gives them to."

There is a certain young lady at Cape May who is said to have refused four offers of marriage, her excuse being that her admirers were all too rich.

The best cough drops for young ladies, are to drop the practice of dressing thin when they go out into the night air.

A great man is most calm in storms, a little one most stormy in calms.

Miscellany.

WOMAN'S STRATEGY.

A brief time since, how short a period
it is needless to specify, there lived and probably still dwells, a lady of ample means, in a nice little village, about the centre of Massachusetts. She was married, cooly to look upon, and not arrived
at an age when nature calls for artistic help from art. As she presided over a handsome establishment, and was of a genial disposition, her society was courted
and sought after. The mansion of Mrs.
Wilbur, ornate gothic, retired somewhat
from public gaze, and modestly nestled amid embowering trees and flowering shrubs. The location, too, was picturesque, on the crest of a gently sloping
hill overlooking the white village houses,
and the eye, after resting on a blue gleaming river, wandered into distance, beyond wooded space, to where gray hills blended
with the tints of the sky.

It was a night in the Fall, when whistling winds whirl the crisp leaves in rustling eddies, and pipe strange minstrelsy round sharp corners. Such a night when the moon of nature over her faded glory
seem to awake kindred feelings in the human heart, and cause people to creep closer to the hearth for the comforts roachsafed them. Mrs. Wilbur was much alone
during the necessary absence of her husband, but being a woman of a cultivated and well-balanced mind, she created sufficient occupation to prevent any weariness
in her own society from obtruding. Her parlor was not merely a reception room, it bore a hospitable look of welcome in the open piano, the volumes of polite literature
which bore the appearance of being read,
and various little nick-nacks of female ingeniety, scattered here and there in tasteful confusion. This evening she was emphatically alone; there happened to be an entertainment somewhere, which she gave the servants permission to attend,
and when a ring announced company she opened the hall door herself.

"Why, Mrs. Wilbur, it is possible I have all the help left you?" asked Mrs.
Russell, a pert, over-dressed lady of recent style. "I declare it is too bad you have to attend the doctor yourself!"
"Talking the while, this lady, a neighbor, walked directly into the parlor, followed by a young man, extensively got up in the style expressly termed "fond."
After seating herself, Mrs. Russell added:
"Allow me to introduce my friend, Mr.
Pierce; as the evening was so dark, he offered to escort me, and knowing Mr.
Wilbur was away, I thought I would come and sit awhile. But where is Nellie?"

Mrs. Wilbur bowed in response to the introduction, and Mr. Pierce exhibited teeth of immaculate purity, as she smiled
a reply; she then observed:

"Mr. Wilbur being absent, I permitted
the servants to go to a merry-making."
"Not all of them, surely! Are you not afraid without a soul in the house?"
"Oh, no," replied Mrs. Wilbur, "James went to take care of the two girls."
"Other topics were then discussed, in which Mr. Pierce condescended to join,
and Mrs. Wilbur felt indignant with herself, for a disagreeable opinion she involuntarily had imbibed of that young gentleman, who it was easy to see was intensely enamored of himself. His restless gray eye seemed to scan every thing
in and about the apartment with a scru-tinizant air; he appeared to put a mental value upon each article, Larry complimented his wife's toilet, and she laughed at his flattery, and she concluded the sooner the ordeal was over the better.

Slowly and lingeringly the heroic woman
made her preparations, aware that every
movement was closely watched by cruel
eyes, thirsting for her property; it might be her life. Her feeble resistance would soon be overcome; what few cries she
could raise, he borne away on air; the
position was critical—one to try the soul—
yet she carried an unembarrassed exterior,
though every fibre was at its utmost tension, and quietly extinguishing the light
she sought her couch.

Now came the moments of horror! In
a little while nothing was heard but the
tick of the ormolu clock on the mantel,
the fainter response of the watch over the
pillow, and the loud bounds of her own
heart. After all, she might have been mistaken, and that face only an optical
delusion, the creation of a feverish brain,
based upon a morbid sentiment, hastily
imbibed. As she argued herself into these ideas, and they grew more tangible, she
insensibly yielded to the influences of
sleep, when her energies were again
aroused to full activity by a fumbling at
the lock. Next the door stealthily opened,
Mr. Pierce walked nimbly in, closed it softly behind him, came directly towards
her, and threw the glare of a dark lantern
full on her face. Mrs. Wilbur firmly closed her eyes that she might not see
the hand raised to slay her; shall we call
it fear which oppressed her, for she moved
not, no quiver agitated the lids across
which the light flickered, no muscle twitched
at the touch of his cold finger drawn
over her cheek. Those who have had a similar experience may decide the knotty
question; we never have,—but reader,
let us believe it was no enviable position
to be alone, unarmed, and in the presence
of a burglar.

When Mr. Pierce had satisfied himself

not feel so secure?" queried the male guest.
"No, indeed, I sleep right over where we sit."

"I would not be in your place for anything," vehemently exclaimed Mrs. Russell, "you might try out until you were hoarse, and no creature hear!"
"There is no fear that I shall be put to such a test," cooly answered Mrs. Wilbur, and turned the conversation into other channels until her guests arose to depart. She accompanied them to the door and looked out on the night, which was dark and chill. The moon was absent; not a star peeped from out the dark canopy of Heaven, and the wind rustled
in fitful murmurs about the thick evergreens which flanked the porch. After Mrs. Wilbur returned to the parlor, she drew a chair before the open grate, and fell into a dreamy state of meditative retrospection. The manner and bearing of Mr. Pierce pertinaciously haunted her—she did not like the man; why, she could not define, and she felt annoyed not only for giving way to the feeling, but also that she had been so explicit about her domestic economy and the whereabouts of her plate.

The wintry voice of the wind became more shrill, and heavy rain-drops pattered upon the piazza with a regular drip
that she could have avowed were stealthy
footsteps, and the hall door creaked
and shook as if a hand was turning the lock.

"Pshaw," she ejaculated, "I'm getting stupid, I have allowed that silly woman's tattle to unnerve me."

So she arose to shake off the spell, and laughing inwardly at her own weakness,
she extinguished the lamp, looked to the fastenings, and taking her chamber light, went up stairs. The house never felt so vacant and dreary, and though a sensation of drowsiness had nearly overpowered
her senses in the parlor, it had yielded to the act of locomotion, and now she had no desire to retire. A book lay upon the toilet table, and drawing forward a chair,
she resolved to read awhile. By degrees
she became absorbed in the volume, but after a time it seemed as if an attraction
she could not resist, compelled her to turn her eyes to a particular spot whence the fascination came.

Over the chamber door was a square
orifice for air, closed by a window-pane which turned upon a swivel; this was open and a face filled the aperture, coolly watching her, whom Mrs. Wilbur instantly recognized as that of her recent guest, Mr. Pierce. He caught her eye and the head withdrew. But what could she do? Who was he, and what had brought him back in that secret fashion?
It was not friendly relations—he knew her secret—that room was the point of interest—if she screamed or tried to escape
he would kill her; all her repugnance
and dread of the man was explained now,
as she sat reflecting.

Mrs. Wilbur was a woman of nerve,
still her heart gave hard thumps against her side, a cold clammy dew overspread
her forehead, and her eyes seemed to burn
in the sockets. She sat as rigid as a figure of bronze, her hearing was as keen as an Indian's, and she heard each flutter in the hall of the assassin she expected was preparing to walk deliberately in. But he came not; for an hour at least, Mrs.
Wilbur remained apparently intent on her book; it seemed an age, a cycle of time, as she revolved every feasible mode of escape from the horrible incubus. Each project was more futile than another, and she finally resolved to retire; it was evident by his patient waiting, that plunder,
dot murder, was his object, and she concluded the sooner the ordeal was over the
better.

Slowly and lingeringly the heroic woman
made her preparations, aware that every
movement was closely watched by cruel
eyes, thirsting for her property; it might
be her life. Her feeble resistance would soon be overcome; what few cries she
could raise, he borne away on air; the
position was critical—one to try the soul—
yet she carried an unembarrassed exterior,
though every fibre was at its utmost ten-
sion, and quietly extinguishing the light
she sought her couch.

Now came the moments of horror! In
a little while nothing was heard but the
tick of the ormolu clock on the mantel,
the fainter response of the watch over the
pillow, and the loud bounds of her own
heart. After all, she might have been
mistaken, and that face only an optical
delusion, the creation of a feverish brain,
based upon a morbid sentiment, hastily
imbibed. As she argued herself into these ideas, and they grew more tangible, she
insensibly yielded to the influences of
sleep, when her energies were again
aroused to full activity by a fumbling at
the lock. Next the door stealthily opened,
Mr. Pierce walked nimbly in, closed it
softly behind him, came directly towards
her, and threw the glare of a dark lantern
full on her face. Mrs. Wilbur firmly
closed her eyes that she might not see
the hand raised to slay her; shall we call
it fear which oppressed her, for she moved
not, no quiver agitated the lids across
which the light flickered, no muscle twitched
at the touch of his cold finger drawn
over her cheek. Those who have had a similar experience may decide the knotty
question; we never have,—but reader,
let us believe it was no enviable position
to be alone, unarmed, and in the presence
of a burglar.

When Mr. Pierce had satisfied himself

that the lady really slept, he walked direct to the closet, deliberately examined each box, and transferred the contents to a large bag, putting the costly jewelry,
for safer keeping, into his pockets; and after assuring himself, by strict scrutiny
that he had overlooked nothing worth having, retired without casting one glance
upon the sleeper who had been a silent
though not uninteresting spectator. Rendered bold by success, the burglar went firmly down stairs, loitered awhile in the hall, closed the door with a jar, and Mrs.
Wilbur heard the echo of his steps on the piazza, until the sound gradually faded
out in the distance, and the clock and the wind had it all to themselves again.

Now was Mrs. Wilbur's time for action;
she arose hastily, attired herself, and swiftly descending made her exit by the back door. It was not so dark now, for the sky had cleared, and from between rifts in the hurrying clouds, specks of blue,
dotted with stars, enabled her to stumble
her way across lots, and over fences to where the Squire lived. Her story and her wrongs were soon narrated to sympathizing listeners, and when the excitement, dissipating Mrs. Pierce's pretensions at the station to secure a ticket by the first train to Boston, he and his booty
were incontinently confiscated by a vul-
gar individual in the form of a constable.

Conviction soon followed, and Mr.
Pierce can be seen any day in Charlestown State Prison, adding his mite to the Commonwealth's mines, his extensive outfit, glossy curls, and diamond jewelry,
which, by the way, were borrowed, as debauch as ever, though less charming to Mrs. Russell and similar ladies.

"CHARITY" REBUKED.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

In your last issue I notice that I was the innocent cause of your correspondent
"Charity" being much amused at reading your paper. I write this "merry war karstie" (K) reply to afford Charity
further amusement. This doughty official, champion and defender shoots very wide
of the mark when he

the deep, as well as upon the mighty sun which warms and cheers the millions of creatures that live in its light,—upon them has he written, "None of us liveth to himself."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1867.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

SOCIAL LOVES! The QUINCY BRASS BAND has decided to give a course of Social Loves in the Town Hall, during the Fall and Winter, which will, we doubt not, greatly enhance the sociabilities and pleasures in our vicinity. The ostensible object of which, is, to procure sufficient funds, to enable those who compose the Band, to appear in a new and uniform dress,—which seems desirable,—yet in so doing, they have in view the general interest and welfare of the community. Those who appreciate the excellent effects of having so fine a body of musicians in our midst, who, upon all occasions, disperse the most beautiful and charming pieces, composed by the best talent of the day, will most heartily and cordially lend to this enterprise their warmest sympathies and co-operation. A course of well conducted assemblies, is at all times, conducive to the conviviality of society; especially when given by a large and well disciplined Brass Band, under the most competent leadership.

The people of Quincy, as a community, hardly value the services of the Band, but those of towns, which are not so well favored in this respect, are prodigal in their encomiums of the exquisitely fine productions by the Band, which they have listened to. Whenever this course is inaugurated, it is hoped our people will give it the most welcome countenance and patronage. It will not only present an opportunity to enjoy the felicity and pleasure, which ever attend such gatherings, if properly managed, but it will afford the happy privilege of lending aid to an object, which in all its features, commands the highest respect and appeals to the most generous impulses of our nature.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS. There was a very large assembly at the caucus at the Town Hall, on Monday evening last, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative to General Court, and to choose a Town Committee for the ensuing year. Charles Marsh, Esq., was chosen Chairman, and George A. Barker, Clerk. On motion of Mr. Wheeler, an informal ballot was taken for Representative, with the following result:—

Whole number of votes, 142
Wm. S. Morton, 60
S. T. Aldrich, 50
E. E. Williamson, 29
J. D. Whitcher, 3
A formal ballot was then taken with the following result:—
Whole number of votes, 148
W. S. Morton, (for of License,) 69
S. T. Aldrich, (Prohibitionist,) 63
E. E. Williamson, (A. P. L. L.) 16
On motion of Mr. Williamson, Mr. Morton was declared the nominee.

The following persons were chosen vote distributors:—William Ditson, N. A. Glover, E. P. Nightingale, G. S. Coffin, Henry Chubbuck and Jonas Shackley.

The following gentlemen were then chosen as a Town Committee, for the year ensuing:—Charles Marsh, E. E. Williamson, Charles A. Howland, Wm. S. Morton, Joseph W. Robertson, E. S. Chapin, John Glover and Wm. B. Dugan.

ACCIDENT. John J. Glover, Esq., the popular President of the Quincy Horse Railroad Company, has been confined to his house for several days. He made a misstep on Sunday last, falling about two feet, and dislocating his left ankle. It pained him considerably at first, but he is happy to say that he is now quite comfortable.

BOLD AND DARING ROBBERY. The house of Mrs. John Phillips, Cottage street, Dorchester, was entered on Monday afternoon and a large amount of valuable property stolen. Mrs. Phillips left her house about four o'clock in the afternoon to call upon a friend, and the thieves, no doubt watching their opportunity, succeeded in getting through her chamber window. The drawers were broken open and a gold watch, with a hair chain composed of the hair of her deceased children and most highly prized, and money amounting to nearly four hundred dollars, were carried away.

DEATH OF EX-GOV. ANDREW. John A. Andrew, Ex-Governor of the Commonwealth died at his residence in Boston on Wednesday evening last. On Tuesday evening the Governor fell ill, and expressed a fear of paralysis. Dr. Derby was immediately called. When he entered the Governor made a gesture significant of his knowledge of his condition. Mrs. Andrew entered the room, and the Governor who had been supported to a couch, pressed her hand. As he was speechless but not unconscious, he was asked if he wished a pencil and paper, and signifying assent they were brought. His right hand refused its office, and he attempted to use his left hand, but finding it fruitless he placed the pencil between his teeth, sensible even then of his condition, but the pencil dropped from his lips and he passed into that sleep from which he never awoke to a realizing sense of the scenes of this world.

His funeral will take place at noon to-day, at the Berkley street Church, Boston. He was born at Windham, Maine, May 31st, 1818.

GRAND OPENING. We would call the attention of our lady readers to the grand opening of fall and winter styles of bonnets and hats on Wednesday and Thursday next. See notice in another column.

THE QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD.

We are surprised and pained to learn that unless prompt measures are used to sustain this most useful source to all classes, of communication to Boston, it will cease to exist.

The owners of this Railroad, few in number, are among the most respected, influential and public spirited citizens of Quincy. Shall they suffer in projecting an enterprise, that runs a street car every hour in the day from Boston to Penn's Hill, South Quincy. That affords facilities of communication equal to those from Boston to its connecting cities and suburbs. That brings the cars to the doors of a good portion of the citizens of Quincy, to say nothing of Dorchester. A means of communication, that for a small fraction over fourteen cents, enables a safe, commodious, and easy passage every hour of an adult person from South Quincy to State street, Boston?

During the past year 60,000 passengers patronized the cars from the town of Quincy, about half as many as take the steam cars from Quincy to Boston. On the whole route through Quincy the valuation of real estate has increased; in North Quincy greatly enhanced.

The advantages and accommodations to the travelling public are so apparent to all as needs no language to illustrate their details. All are benefited and no interests injured. The Quincy Horse Railroad has become a portion of the great enterprises, that go to advance the growth and prosperity of this town. It would be a day of sorrow to witness the discontinuance of this road. We feel that the citizens of Quincy and Dorchester will never suffer this, more especially when the means of continuance can be easily reached, and the railroad made as permanent as our highways.

Every real estate resident on or near the road could take one bond or more, and reap the benefits by a sure increase in the value of real estate. We believe the town of Quincy at a public meeting could for that purpose, would liberally contribute to sustain this source of travel through its limits, that accommodates all classes. For the honor and interests of our town let the railroad be sustained. The writer of this article is a patron, but no stockholder in the Quincy Horse Railroad Company.

MODERN MIRACLES.

For the Patriot.

The latest sensation in Paris is a Zouave, by name, Jacob. He is a musician in the Imperial Guard at Versailles. He heals the sick by ordering them to be well. The lame, the blind, and the diseased so through the street before his door, as to render it impassable, and a number of policemen are required to keep it open. They are let in, twenty or thirty at a time, their crutches, canes, and other helps taken from them, and they are seated on a long bench in a row. Jacob walks before them, glancing with a quick, sharp look upon each,—sometimes stopping to tell some poor creature that he cannot cure him, and that he must not come again, and then orders them all to get up and be off. If they hesitate, he shows his impatience by harsh words, or a round oath,—and very generally they obey, and go out of the room, walking, seeing and healed.

Zouave Jacob is a man about forty years old, dark hair, and dark keen eyes, full of light,—of medium size, quite muscular, and of strong self-control. To his patients, he is peremptory and unsympathetic. He seems to set but little value upon his powers. Makes no promises. Charges nothing for his services,—and appears to trouble himself very lightly about the permanency of his cures so long as they manifest improvement enough to hobble or dance out of his presence without help.

THE RIVAL CANDIDATES.

For the Patriot.

The account of the Councilor Convention in last week's paper, gave some impression that the contest is to be "between the friends of Messrs. Brackett and Endicott;" on the contrary, these gentlemen have many personal friends in common.

The contest is one of principle. Mr. Brackett is the candidate of the Conservative and Liberal. Mr. Endicott, of the Republican Prohibitionist. The Liberal Republicans have refused to vote for him.

GOOD TEMPLARS. The Mount Wollaston Lodge, of this town are entering on their third year. The following officers have been elected for the ensuing quarter, and will be installed next Wednesday evening, and all members are requested to be present.

W. C. T.—Elisha Packard.
W. F. T.—Abbie I. Hails.
W. S.—Myra Southworth.
W. F. S.—William Crane.
W. T.—A. Gerrie White.
W. C.—Rebecca Basley.
W. M.—John S. Gay.
W. J. G.—Annie L. Thayer.
W. O. C.—Owen Jones.
W. A. S.—E. H. Starbuck.
W. R. S.—George Randall.
W. L. S.—C. W. Carter.

WASHINGTON HALL. We are pleased to learn that Mr. George W. Tarbox, well known for his enterprise and activity in business matters, has recently erected a neat and commodious hall over his large store, in the Railway Village, of Milton. An institution for public lectures and assemblies much needed in this community. We wish him success in his new enterprise.

In Chicago, a few days since, three brothers, named Ulbrich, were married to three sisters, named Schnur. In other words, all the children in one family were married to all the children in the other.

SHALL WE VOTE FOR SUCH?

I have always been in favor of a Prohibitory Law,—and have said, "that no matter what should come, no vote or word of mine would assist a License man to position or office." In this statement, I have been encouraged by many other citizens of Quincy, who have told me frankly that they never would vote for a man who was known to be in favor of Rum and License; but they would sooner suffer all the pains of defeat, rather than go to the ballot box and deposit a vote that they knew would oppose the present Prohibitory Law.

Now the time has come when such men ought to come out, and hold up this promise. Faint-hearted citizens,—those who have stood prominent among the Prohibitionists in opposition to any change, have begun to whisper among themselves, that they are too weak to depend upon a strict Temperance nomination, and therefore, must break their promise, and swallow a License man, in order to keep victory on their side of the house. This is unfair,—weak and cowardly. Their promise, talks, actions, ought now to be put to the service of Prohibition. It is not well enough for them that when the question seemed running in their favor, they could afford to stand up for Temperance,—but they should remember that the day of contest has come. It is the time to test their sincerity and the virtue of their promises. Never mind if we are defeated; remember that we are fighting on the side of right, and that is all we ought to know, whether we are in the majority or minority. Any departure from this line of action is sheer cowardice.

Here, in our town, are the ministers, all but one, expressed Prohibitionists. Here are the Good Templars, that are required to vote on this side. Here are many intelligent, honest citizens, whose talk, and whose actions, have been for Prohibition. Can these men depart from their beliefs, arguments, judgment and promises, and vote for a man who is offensive to them, on account of his expressed sentiments, to work just opposite to the cause of Temperance? I may tell you, with long faces, a W. must keep the party together. But must we sacrifice every thing, and submit ourselves to party discipline? I hope an independent nomination of a Prohibitory candidate will be made, and that every Prohibitionist will see to it that he deposits his vote for such a man. E. L.

TEMPERANCE LICENSE.

For the Patriot.

DEAR PATRIOT, I have seen in the late numbers of the Patriot several communications on the subject of the Liquor Law, as it is called, and I intended to say a few words in reply to the arguments of your correspondents, but to my very great surprise the Republican Caucus on Monday evening spared me the trouble of writing, and your readers the necessity of reading, by nominating a License man,—thus admitting that all their talk about Temperance for many years was used only as a means of getting into office, and now they intend to use the other argument to keep it. What a commentary on Rev. Mr. Aldrich's "Word in Season"! and on Mr. Uriah's harangue on last Sunday evening! Of course I have no objection to the action of the Republicans, and only thank them for this practical answer to their impracticable theory. It is some-what singular that the men who use the coarsest language in advocating the political ideas they endeavor to promulgate, call themselves temperance men. These men ought to consider that temperance in language is even worse than intemperance in drink. The drunken man has the poor excuse that he does not know what he is saying,—the intemperate lecturer will not plead that he is drunk with passion, when he uses such language as I have heard attributed to the so-called temperance lecturers in this town session. These men continue to call the selling of liquor a crime, and those engaged in the sale of liquor criminals. If they were worth while spending time in answering this foolish accusation, I would do so, but their own action on Monday, is the best answer to their own doctrine. This very law, which they call the Prohibitory Law, is in itself even more than a License Law. It says that in every town in the Commonwealth, a place shall be provided for the sale of this poison, as they call it, and a person be appointed by the town to sell it. Now according to Rev. Mr. Aldrich, as he is reported, this person, who, no doubt, considers himself respectable, must be part of the debris of society, and be a part of the filth of the town. This is the classic logic, and the polite language of a clergyman, who, no doubt, wishes to be considered as a Christian gentleman. After election, when the political managers are through with their maneuvers, I will, with your permission, give my opinion of what I think is the duty of

A TEMPERANCE MAN.

LECTURE. The Town Hall was crowded on Sunday evening last. E. H. Union, Esq. of Boston, delivered a very able and interesting discourse on Temperance—giving in a free and pleasing style his own experience in drinking, and the miseries attending the vice—which was well received by an appreciating audience, and we doubt not will have good effect on some of the many young men present.

MEDICAL AUTHORITIES have announced that not less than one-fifth of the entire population of the United States are afflicted with Neuralgia in some form. Surely the man who can safely remove such a vast aggregate of pain is a great public benefactor. Such is Dr. Turner, of Boston, in Massachusetts. His "UNIVERSAL NEURALGIA PILL" is pronounced, on all hands, to be an entirely harmless and perfectly certain remedy for the most torturing of all known diseases.—See advertisement in another column.

DORCHESTER ANNEXATION.

[The Chairman of the Committee on Annexation having refused to furnish a copy of the letter written by Mr. Scudder, in reply to them, a copy of the correspondence has been obtained from that gentleman, and is herewith published.]

Dorchester, October 23, 1867.

DEAR SIR: By request, as Chairman of the Committee on Annexation, I take the liberty of addressing you.

We notice by the public papers that you have been nominated for the office of Senator from our District. It now becomes important that we should know your views upon the subject of Annexation.

I would therefore respectfully ask you, are you in favor of annexing the town of Dorchester to the city of Boston?

An early reply will much oblige, Yours respectfully,

JOHN G. NAZRO,

Chairman Com. on Annexation.

HENRY A. SCUDDER, Esq., Dorchester.

Dorchester, October 25, 1867.

"DEAR SIR: Your letter in behalf of the 'Committee on Annexation' has been received by me, in which you state that the recent action of the Republican Convention at Dedham, naming me for the office of Senator from our District, renders it important that you should know my views upon the subject of Annexation. And you accordingly ask me if I am in favor of annexing the town of Dorchester to the city of Boston.

Without expressing my views more fully upon the subject referred to, permit me to say that I am opposed to the annexation of the town of Dorchester to the city of Boston. A firm conviction, (resulting from careful consideration of the subject,) that the social, political and pecuniary interests of the citizens of Dorchester will not be advanced by the change proposed, and a proper regard for the interests of the County of Norfolk, of which Dorchester has so long formed an important part, satisfy me of the correctness of this position. Very respectfully,

H. A. SCUDDER,

To JOHN G. NAZRO, Esq.,

Chairman Com. on Annexation, Dorchester.

CONTENTMENT.
BY DR. HOLMES.
"Man wants but little here below."
Little I ask; my wants are few;
I only wish a hut of stone
(A very plain brown stone will do),
That I may call my own;
And close at hand is such a one,
In yonder street that fronts the sun.
Plain food is quite enough for me;
Three courses are as good as ten;
If Nature can satisfy on that,
Thank Heaven for three. Amen!
I always thought cold victuals nice,
My choice would be vanilla-ice.

"I care not much for gold or land;
Give me a mortgage here and there,
Some good bank-stock, some note of hand,
Or trifling railroad shares,
I only ask that fortune send
A little more than I shall spend.
Honors are silly toys, I know,
And titles are but empty names;
I would, perhaps, be Plinio—
But only that St. James;
I'm very sure I should not care
To fill our Governor's chair.
Jewels are baubles; 'tis a sin
To care for such unfruitful things;
One good-sized diamond in a pin,
Some note or large in rings,
A ruby and a pearl, or so,
Will do for me; I laugh at show.
My dame should dress in cheap attire
(Good heavy silks are never dear);
I own perhaps I might desire
Some shawls of true Cashmere,
Some marrowy crapes of China silk,
Like wrinkled skins on scalded milk.
Wealth's wasteful tricks I will not learn,
Nor ape the glittering upstart fool;
Shall not carved tables serve my turn,
But all must be of built?
Give graving-pump its double care,
I ask but one recumbent chair.
Thus humble let me live and die,
Nor long for Midas' golden touch;
I shall not miss them much,
Too grateful for the blessing lent
Of simple tastes and mind content!

MY LOVE LETTERS.

"Are there any more of these letters?"
When her father asked this question, in an awful tone, Lucilla Richmond could not say, "No," and dared not say "Yes," but as an intermediate course burst into tears, and sobbed behind her handkerchief.
"Bring them to me, Lucilla," said her father, as if she had answered him, as, indeed, she had; and the girl, trembling and weeping, arose to obey him.
Then Mrs. Richmond, her daughter's very self grown older, came behind her husband's chair and patted him on the shoulder.
"Please don't be hard with her, my dear, she said coaxingly. He's a nice young man, and it's our fault after all as much as hers, and you won't break her young heart I'm sure."
"Perhaps you approve of the whole affair, ma'am," said Mr. Richmond.
"I do—no—that is, I only," gasped the little woman, and hearing Lucilla coming, she sank back into her chair, blushing herself dreadfully for not having been present at all her daughter's music lessons during the past year.
"Fall all this disturbance, arose from a music teacher who had given lessons to Miss Lucilla for twelve months, and who had taken the liberty of falling in love with her, knowing well that she was the daughter of one of the richest men in Yorkshire.
"It was inexcusable in a poor music teacher, who should have known his place," Mr. Richmond declared, and he clutched the little perfumed billet which had fallen into his hands as he might a scorpion, and waited for the others with a look upon his face which told of no softening.
They came at last, six little white envelopes, tied together with a blue ribbon, and were laid at his elbow by his despairing daughter.
"Lock these up until I return home this evening," he said to his wife; "I will read them then. Meanwhile Lucilla is not to see this music master on any pretence."
And then Miss Lucilla went down upon her knees:
"Oh, dear papa!" she cried, "dearest papa, please don't say I must never see him again. I couldn't bear it. I judged I could not. He's poor, I know, but he is a gentleman, and I—I like him much, papa."
"No more of this absurdity, my dear," said Mr. Richmond. "He has been artful enough to make you think him perfect, I suppose. Your parents know what is best for your happiness. A music teacher is not a match for Miss Richmond."

With this remark Mr. Richmond put on his hat and overcoat, and departed.
Then Lucilla and her mother took the opportunity of falling into each other's arms.
"It is so naughty of you," said Mrs. Richmond. "But oh, dear, I can't blame you. It was exactly so with me. I ran away with your papa, you know, and my parents objected because of his poverty. I feel the greatest sympathy for you, and Frederick has such fine eyes, and is so pleasing, I wish I could soften your papa."
"When he has seen the letters there'll be no hope, I'm very much afraid," sobbed Miss Lucilla. "Fred is so romantic, and papa hates romance."
"He used to be very romantic himself in those old times," said Mrs. Richmond.
"Such letters as he wrote me. I have them in my desk yet. He said he should die if I refused him."
"So does Fred," said Lucilla.
"And that life would be worthless without me; and about my being beautiful (he thought so, you know). I'm sure he ought to sympathize a little, said Mrs. Richmond.
But she dared not promise that he would.
She coaxed her darling to stop crying, and made her lie down; and then went up into her own room to put the letters into her desk; and as she placed them in one pigeon-hole, she saw in another a bundle, tied exactly as those were, and drew them out.
These letters were to a Lucilla also. One who had received them twenty years before—and she now a matron old enough to have a daughter who had heart troubles—unfolding them one by one, wondering how it came to pass that lover's letters were all so much alike.
Half a dozen—just the same number, and much more romantic than those the music master had written to her daughter Lucilla.
A strange idea came into Mrs. Richmond's mind. She dared not oppose her husband, by a look or word, she never had attempted such a thing.
But she was very fond of her daughter. When she left the desk she looked guilty and frightened, and something in her pockets rustled as she moved. But she said nothing to any one on the subject until the dinner hour arrived, and with it came her husband, angrier and more determined than ever. The meal was passed in silence, then having adjourned to the parlor, Mr. Richmond seated himself in a great arm-chair and demanded:
"The letters," in a voice of thunder.
Mrs. Richmond put her hand into her pocket, and pulled it out again with a frightened look.
Mr. Richmond again repeated, still more sternly:

"Those absurd letters, if you please, my dear mama."
And then the little woman faltered: "I—that is—I believe—yes, dear—I believe I have them," and gave him a pile of white envelopes, encircled with blue ribbon, with a hand that trembled like an aspen leaf.
As for Lucilla, she began to weep at the end of all things had come at last, and felt sure that if papa should prove cruel she should die.
"Six letters—six shameful pieces of deception, Lucilla," said the indignant parent. "I am shocked that a child of mine could practice such duplicity. Hem! let me see: Number one, I believe. June, and this is December. Half a year you have deceived us then, Lucilla. Let me see—ah! From the first moment he adored you, eh? Nonsense. People don't fall in love in that absurd manner. It takes years of acquaintance and respect and attachment. With your smiles for his goal, he would win both fame and fortune, poor as he is!" Fiddlesticks, Lucilla! A man who has common sense would always wait until he had a fair commencement before he proposed to any girl. "Praise of your beauty. The loveliest creature he ever saw!" Exaggeration, my dear. You are not plain, but such flattery is absurd. "Must leave from you or die!" Dear, dear—how absurd!"
And Mr. Richmond dropped the first letter, and took up another.
"I hope you don't believe a word he says. A plain, earnest, upright sort of man would never go into such rhapsodies, I am sure. Ah! now in number three he calls you an angel!" He is romantic, upon my word. And what is all this?"
"Those who would forbid me to see you can find no fault with me but my poverty. I am honest—I am earnest in my efforts. I am by birth a gentleman, and I love you from my soul. Do not let them sell you for gold, Lucilla."
"Great heavens, what impertinence to your parents!"
"I don't remember Fred's saying anything of that kind," said poor little Lucilla. "He never knew you would object."
Mr. Richmond shook his head, frowned, and read on in silence until the last sheet lay under his hand. Then, with an ejaculation of rage, he started to his feet.
"Infamous!" he cried: "I'll go to him this instant—I'll horsewhip him—I'll—I'll murder him! As for you, by Jove, I'll send you to a convent. Elope, elope with a music teacher! I'm ashamed to call you my daughter. Where's my hat? Give me my boots. Here, John, call a cab—I—but here Lucilla caught one arm and Mrs. Richmond the other.
"Oh, papa, are you crazy?" said Lucilla. "Frederick never proposed such a thing. Let me see the letter. Oh, papa, this is not Fred's—upon my word it is not. Do look, papa; it is dated twenty years back, and Frederick's name is not Charlie!" Papa, these are your love letters to mamma, written long ago. Her name is Lucilla, you know!"
Mr. Richmond sat down in his arm chair, in silence, very red in the face.
"How did this occur?" he said, sternly; and little Mrs. Richmond, retreating into a corner, with her handkerchief to her eyes, sobbed:
"I did it on purpose! and paused as though she expected a sudden judgment. But, hearing nothing, she dared at last to rise and creep up to her husband timidly.
"You know, Charlie," she said, "it's so long ago since, and I thought you might not exactly remember—how you fell in love with me at first sight, how papa and mamma objected, and how at last we ran away together; and it seemed to me that if we could bring it all back plainly to you as it was then, we might lead dear Lucilla marry the man she likes, who is good if he is not rich. I did not need it to be brought back any plainer myself; women have more time to remember you know. And we've been very happy—have we not?"
And certainly Mr. Richmond could not deny that. So Lucilla, feeling that her interests might safely be left in her mother's keeping slipped out of the room, and heard the result of the little ruse next morning. It was favorable to the young music teacher, who had really only been sentimental, and had not gone far so far as an elopement; and in due course of time, the two were married with all the pomp and grandeur befitting the nuptials of a wealthy merchant's daughter, with the perfect approbation of Lucilla's papa, and to the great joy of Lucilla's mamma, who justly believed that her little rose had brought about all her daughter's happiness.

TEN FOLLIES.
To think that the more a man eats, the fatter and stronger he will become.
To believe that the more hours children study at school, the faster they learn.
To conclude that if exercise is good for the health the more violent and exhausting it is, the more good it does.
To imagine every hour taken from sleep is an hour gained.
To act on the theory that the smallest room in the house is large enough to sleep in.
To argue that whatever remedy causes one to feel immediately better, is "good for the system," without regard to ulterior effects.
To commit an act which is felt in itself to be prejudicial, hoping that somehow or other it may be done in your case with impunity.
To advise another to take a remedy which you have not tried yourself without making special inquiry whether all the conditions are alike.
To eat without an appetite, or continue to eat after it has been satisfied, merely to gratify the taste.
To eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief time it is passing down the throat, at the expense of a whole night of disturbed sleep, and a weary waking in the morning.

CLOTHES MOTHS.
Against this perpetual nuisance, every housekeeper desires to know how to guard her treasures.
They appear in successive broods through the summer, but cease eating in the autumn, and retire into their cases as soon as cold weather comes on. In the warm spring, they are again on the rampage, and early in June, all woollens and furs should be dusted, shaken and beaten. The furs and small articles should be placed in bags with bits of camphor wood, red cedar, or Spanish cedar, scattered among them. Sheets of paper sprinkled with spirits of turpentine, or carbolic acid, coarse camphor, tobacco leaves, or shavings of Russian leather, should be laid among the larger articles as they are laid away in drawers. The cloth linings of carriages can be protected forever by sponging them over with a solution of corrosive sublimate in alcohol, made just strong enough not to leave a stain of white on a black leather. Recent experiments made with carbolic acid, however, indicate it to be the great dependence for the destruction of all these animals, or parasitic plagues,—as all insects avoid it or are killed by it.

DEATH AND RAIN.
Rain, on the whole, should seem to exert a kindly and healthy influence. There is nothing very deadly in it. It may occasion catarrhs and rheumatic complaints, but these are curable with a little management and medicine. And we are to put to its credit the washing away of many of the filth of the sewers. Summer diarrhoea, cholera and typhoid fever would be likely to be lessened by a copious rain fall. Dr. Trench, the medical officer of Liverpool, has satisfied himself by a series of careful observations, extending over a number of years, that there is an inverse ratio between the amount of rain and the amount of mortality from infantile summer diarrhoea. To the same effect are the tables given by Mr. Macpherson, illustrating the relations of moisture to the mortality of cholera in Calcutta. According to these tables, the least mortality from cholera in Calcutta occurs in the months of July, August, and September, which are emphatically the wet months.—Lancet

COARSE BREAD.
It is well known among physiologists that the teeth and bones are durable and strong in proportion as they contain one of the elements of lime, and that the food which contains these constituents in large quantities is best adapted to the formation of good teeth and strong limbs. In the item of bread, used in every family, a striking fact is exhibited: in 500 pounds of the finest flour for table use there are thirty pounds of these bone-forming elements; in an equal amount of bread made of the whole wheat, there are eighty-five pounds of the bone and tooth-forming principles, hence it is not to be wondered at, that the Scotch are the thriftest and hardiest race in the world, for they luxuriate on their dearly beloved oat-meal gruel, bread and cakes three times a day. The whole grain of Indian corn or wheat prepared as recommended does not fatten as much as fine flour, the latter having twice the amount of fat-forming principle; but fat is not strength; it does not give endurance, toughness, hardness, capability of work; the whole grain of the Indian, wheat, rye, oats, does, and from five to fifteen, children should be compelled to make one daily meal, wholly of one of these grains, prepared as above.—Hall's Journal of Health.

LITTLE THINGS.
Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a frown—all are little things, but powerful

BABY'S KISS.

Two baby lips are raised to press
Their innocence on mine;
Two baby eyes join the carress,
And murmur sweetly
Two baby hands entwined
My whiskers.
All warm with which I greet her kiss,
The pain she gives me cools;
For half the kiss, and all the bliss,
I miss whenever she pulls
My whiskers.
"No rose without a thorn"—who'd guess
She could so well express
That old, old truth, by sweet carress,
On lips, and such distress
To whiskers?

FORK YOUR GARDENS.

Professional gardeners well understand the full management of these important little family farms. It is needless to tell them how much the success of next year's crops depend upon turning up the ground late in the winter, intended for such crops. But there are many others—those who have small gardens—and in this class are many of our well-to-do farmers—who only raise half crops of vegetables, and that of an inferior quality, and wonder why it is so.

Now, if they will use the garden fork and turn the soil up full deep, allowing it to remain in lumps all winter exposed to the frost, it will put the soil in excellent condition and tend greatly to add to the production of next year's crops. Gardens, and especially old ones, should also be limed about once in five years, and sowed every other year, applying of lime at the rate of about thirty bushels to the acre, and of salt from eight to ten. In applying salt keep it from coming in contact with box-edges and all other evergreens, very small trees, &c. Such a course will bring up your old gardens in a surprising manner. Turnips, radishes, &c., will grow as well as they ever did, and all other vegetables be largely benefited.—Gen. Telegraph.

IMPROVED CATTLE—AYRSHIRE.

Whether it has been by crossing, on the part of breeders, or from improved management and keeping, certain it is that all the leading stocks have shown marked improvement within the last thirty or forty years. Among the most noticeable of these improved breeds, and marked favorites with cattle breeders and dairymen, is the Ayrshire, supposed to be an improved development of the old Teeswater, once in high repute in various parts of England. Flint, in his treatise on milch cows and dairy farming, devotes considerable space to this breed, and concludes that for dairy purposes purely, or mainly, the Ayrshires deserve the first place. In consequence of the cow's small symmetrical and compact body, well formed chest, and capacious stomach, there is little waste through the respiratory system; while, at the same time, there is a very complete assimilation of the food, and thus she converts a large proportion of her food into milk. It is the verdict of many dairymen that, for the quantity of food consumed, the Ayrshire cow gives a larger return of milk, and of a better quality, than any other breed.

THE QUINCY BLIGHT.—SALT. The Rural New Yorker says, "we are informed that a gentleman in this city observing that his quince trees were being blighted and dying off, resorted to the use of salt as a preventive. He dug about the roots of the affected trees; supplied a liberal coating of salt to the soil and replaced that which had been removed. The result was that the present season passed over without any appearance of blight while the yield of fruit was magnificent in quantity and in quality all that could have been desired."

BEST TIME TO PAINT HOUSES. Experiments show that paint on surface exposed to the sun, will be much more durable if applied in autumn or spring, than if put on during hot weather. In cool weather it dries slowly, forms a hard glossy coat, tough like glass, while if applied in warm weather, the oil strikes into the wood, leaving the paint so dry that it is rapidly beaten off by the rain.—Exchange.

Incidents.

"Papa," said a bright-eyed little girl one day, "I believe mamma loves you better than she does me."
Papa held doubts on that subject, but concluded that it was not best to deny the soft impeachment. She meditated thoughtfully about it for some time, evidently construing her father's silence as unfavorable to her side.
"Well," said she at last, "I suppose it's all right; you're the biggest, and it takes more to love you."

Two persons wrangling at a hotel about their propensity to sleep, one said to the other, "As soon as you lie down you don't know any thing until you get up."
"Well," was the reply, "that's better than not to know any thing after you get up."

Daniel Webster had a difficult case to plead, and the verdict was against his client.
One of the witnesses went to him and said: "Mr. Webster, if I had thought you should have lost the case, I might have testified a great deal more than I did."
"It is of no consequence," replied the lawyer, "the jury did not believe a word you said."

Why is a tight boot like a windmill? Because it grinds the corn.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD.—To its rescue. It will be seen by a notice in another column of our paper to-day that the presence of all good citizens is wanted at the Town Hall this evening. Let it not be said, that for the want of energy and a little public spirit on our part, this great public improvement was suffered to languish and die. It would be a lasting disgrace to the town, and being a great wrong to those liberal and high-minded individuals, who projected the enterprise, and to whose untiring exertions, under most trying circumstances, it was finally brought to a successful completion. The idea of abandoning the road, after enjoying its benefits so long, should not for a moment be entertained. We have ample resources to sustain it, and the public wants demand it. Such a course would be ruinous in its consequences, and felt by all classes of the community,—by derailing our business and social relations, now so well established,—and disturbing the natural currents of travel, which this road alone so abundantly furnishes in uninterrupted communication with the city and the communities which lie on its route, every hour in the day and until nine in the evening; besides depriving that class of our citizens, whose vocations confine them at home six days in the week, the privilege of a change of air and place, on the seventh, by a cheap ride, to say nothing of the effects it would have on the interests of our landed proprietors, by suddenly closing up so important an avenue of commerce and trade. The road has been in operation over five and a half years; the last rail was laid in April, 1862, and it was opened for travel the May following. The following receipts and disbursements for October last, will present in part, the present condition of the road:

Receipts, $2,860
Disbursements, $2,400

It is hoped the meeting will be generally attended, and a proper spirit prevail, that will secure the adoption of such measures, as will relieve the road of its present disabilities, and place it in future on a safe and permanent basis.

THE I. O. G. T. The entertainment advertised to be given by Mount Wollaston Lodge of Good Templars next Wednesday evening promises to be of a high order. Vocal and instrumental music, choruses, tableaux, select readings and recitations, make up the programme. The singing will be under the direction of Mr. Brown, Principal of the Coddington School, who will be assisted by a quartette choir from Melrose. L. W. Russell, Esq., of Watertown, a teacher of elocution, will be present and contribute to the entertainment. He will recite the "Beils," and other pieces, both grave and comic. Programmes will be out next Monday.

OLD FOLKS CONCERT. The original Old Folks Concert Company, known as "Father Kemp's," who have concentrated all over this country and in England, are making arrangements for one of their popular entertainments in this place, to come off at the Town Hall, next Monday evening, Nov. 18th. This troupe is very popular, and give a most enjoyable entertainment. Let our citizens turn out and welcome the "OLD FOLKS" with a full house.

WINTER. We have had a speck of it during the week, in a light fall of snow and some pretty sharp weather,—enough to remind us to be prepared for what is soon to follow.

BILLIARD EXHIBITION. Quite a large crowd was attracted to the Billiard Hall, in Goodnow's Building, on Monday evening last. Mr. Edward Daniels the champion billiard player of Massachusetts, was present and showed his skill, in this pleasant and fashionable amusement. Messrs. John H. Flack, L. H. Brooks and Samuel Colby, noted players, were also present, and exhibited some fine performances. Mr. Colby made a run of one hundred and seventy-eight points. A very handsome cue, inlaid with gold, and valued at three hundred and fifty dollars, won by Mr. Daniels, was on exhibition, and was much admired by many of our citizens.

CONGRESS WILL RE-ASSEMBLE, on Thursday next. The President is now at work on his Message, which will be delivered, as usual, on the first Monday of December.

A GOOD DINNER. We would call the attention of those gentlemen visiting the city, who enjoy a good dinner, or even a lunch, to call at the Market Eating House, kept by Messrs. Woods & Hosmer, 46 North Market street, Boston. Mr. Woods is a native of Quincy, has had considerable experience in the business, and knows how to cater to the appetites of his numerous patrons. Many gentlemen of this place have made this their favorite dining saloon, and many more we think would do the same thing if they only knew what an excellent meal can be found at this eating house and at a reasonable price.

A GREAT RUSH. The rush, to the "Grand Opening" of bonnets and hats at the millinery establishment of Miss F. E. Currier, on Wednesday last, we are pleased to learn, more than equalled that of a former occasion. Her goods were a rich and elegant assortment, of every variety and make, and in the manufacture, was displayed that refined taste for which Miss C. is so celebrated. The pleasing and urbane manners of Miss Currier, has secured her many friends, and for the courtesies extended to us she has our thanks.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, Nov. 14, 1867.

A quiet week. The State Election.—The Municipal Election.—Charles Dickens.—The Theatre.—Madame Ristori.

The chronicles of the week, show an unusually quiet condition of the community in this city. The result of the State election has been marvellous, showing how fickle dame fortune is to politicians. Many will occupy seats the present winter in the three branches of our Legislature, who a few weeks since had not the most remote probability in their minds of such honors. It was a campaign for reform, in many features of past injudicious legislation of a local character. The people have rode roughshod over party lines, and have sent men to the forum within the portals of the State House, that will make laws not to infringe upon private rights or demoralize the community by their tyrannical spirit. The report of the Prohibitory Liquor Law, and the act concerning the challenging of jurors, will be promptly acted upon, and a system of retrenchment is looked for in the abolishment of many useless offices, that will save the Commonwealth a large outlay annually of money.

The municipal election is approaching and bids fair to be somewhat spirited. The general opinion here is that Mayor Norcross will be re-elected. As the field is extended for the choice of Aldermen, (by the annexation of Roxbury,) to be twelve in number, and to be voted for on a general ticket,—the selection of candidates may give rise to much difference of opinion, and the grinding of axes will be extensive. The new City Council will consist of sixty members, and the three new wards of Roxbury will be represented by twelve Common Councilmen. Should Rochester be annexed by the action of the next Legislature, the programme of city representation will be again changed.

Charles Dickens, the renowned novelist, sailed from England on Saturday last for Boston. He will be much lionized here and elsewhere. His first reading will be at the Tremont Temple, on Monday evening, December 2d—subject his Christmas Carol and Trial from Pickwick; on Tuesday, Dec. 3d, his David Copperfield; on Thursday, Dec. 5th, Nicholas Nickleby, and on Friday, Dec. 6th, Little Dombey, and the Trial from Pickwick. Admission 15c.

Selwyn's new theatre at the corner of Essex and Washington streets is immensely patronized. For elegance, grandeur and attraction it has no superior in the United States, or perhaps in Europe. Madame Ristori plays through the week at the Boston theatre, and will shortly depart for Havana.

CUTTING DOWNS EXPENSES. An order has been issued by Major Jones suspending sixty-six members, of the State Constabulary, thereby reducing the force to sixty-two members, the minimum provided by the statute. Of these, thirty will be located in Suffolk County, four in Worcester, and the same number in Middlesex, Essex and Norfolk, three in Bristol and two each in Barnstable, Berkshire, Hampshire, Franklin and Hampden counties.

KID GLOVES. Few persons realize the work involved in making these common articles. A skin to be dressed must pass through one hundred and thirty-eight hands; drying requires eighteen manipulations, cutting out thirty-four, sewing seventeen; to sort and pack requires twelve hands,—making more than two hundred in all, before the customer sees them.

DON'T ATTEMPT TO STAND ON YOUR HEAD. A boy in New London, on Saturday, attempted to stand on his head, and strained his neck so that he has been unable to hold his head in an upright position since.

A NOVELTY IN PHOTOGRAPHY has been introduced by the well known operator, F. C. Beal, Boston, that of taking groups in sections. We saw a large picture of twelve persons in a party, which were taken at three different times to suit their convenience, yet by curious manipulations the unity of the picture was preserved.

THREE HOGS PER MINUTE. In one of the large pork packing houses of Cincinnati it is the rule to finish off three hogs per minute. The force required for this embraces two pen-men, one knocker-down, one sticker, two bristle-snatchers, four scrapers, six shavers, (who remove the hair from parts not reached by the scrapers), two gamblers, one cutter, one hose-boy, one side-boy, one splitter, (who fastens the animal open to facilitate cooling), two attendants upon the cutters, one weigher, two elevator-men, four knifemen, one ham-trimmer, one shoulder-trimmer, one packer, six ham-salters, one weigher and brander, one lard-man, one book-keeper, seven porters and laborers.

OUR SCHOOLDAY VISITOR. It is now acknowledged to be one of the best and handsomest, and by far the cheapest Magazine for boys and girls published. The table of contents for November presents its usual attraction of good articles from some of the best writers in the country. The publishers, however, are determined to make the Visitor still more attractive and valuable. The January number will appear in an entire new dress, new type, &c. &c., and bound in a neat tinted cover, printed in color.

THEY offer as an inducement to subscribers to send the last two numbers for 1867 free to all new subscribers for 1868, whose subscriptions are received on or before the first of December next. The price remains the same: $1.25 a year, and to clubs $1.00. Attractive Premiums are offered those who form clubs. Address J. W. Daughaday & Co., Publishers, No. 424 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penn.

QUINCY CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Society was held Monday evening, November 4, when the following persons were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. John D. Wells.
Vice President, Dea. George Baxter.
Secretary, Miss Sophia A. Marsh.
Treasurer, Mrs. Nathan Brickett.
Directors, Messrs. Elbridge Clapp, John C. Randall, Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, Mrs. Eliza Hersey, Mrs. Edmund B. Taylor, Miss Ann Curtis, Miss Susanna B. Marsh, Miss Ellen F. Nightingale.

For the Patriot.
POLITICAL.

It was a happy thought of the President of the congressional meeting, held last week, to invite the defeated candidate to participate; and also to adjourn the assembly for one year, thus opening an arena of good feeling, which I trust will long continue.

It was a quiet and gentlemanly rebuke to narrow minded partisans, who are prone to exult over a short lived victory, and who cannot extend their contracted visions beyond the passing moment.

I trust that the adjourned meeting will be held under as pleasant circumstances.

ONE WHO WAS "THERE TO SEE."

COTTON. There has been, since the first of August last, a decline of seven cents in gold on the price of cotton at Liverpool, a fall equivalent to nearly thirty per cent, upon its previous price. It is the second great fall that cotton has sustained.

CONGRESS, on the 22d of February last, appropriated $750,000 for inclosing the various national cemeteries with proper fencing, and for placing over each grave a commemorative tablet. It has been ascertained that 330,000 tablets will be required—a fearful account of the destructiveness of human life in the late war.

A BIG TAX. The plan of putting greenbacks into the packages of tobacco adopted by the Messrs. Lorillard, of New York, must have been a profitable one as the firm paid from Oct. 1866, to Sept. 1867, $987,471.45 government tax.

LADIES will find a beautiful selection of Chromos and Stereoscopic Views at Dodge, Collier & Perkins, 113 Washington street; also choice Albums and frames of every variety. Those who are seeking hijoux and novelties in art for the holidays will do well to examine their large stock.

BOOK NOTICES.

OLD ENGLAND. Professor Hoppin has in this volume given pleasant pictures of the scenery, art and people of England, into which are gathered elements of choicest interest. An admirable index adds value to the book. The chapter on London and the London pulpit, and that on the Lake country are full of racy description. Hurd & Houghton have placed the volume before the public in a comely dress. It will be welcomed to many winter firesides.

GEORGE HARDING'S MISSION. Miss Kelly is a well known writer for young people, and those who have read her other stories will perceive this handsome volume with interest. H. Hoyt publisher.

I DON'T KNOW, is the quaint title of an instructive story by Miss Phelps. Published by the Massachusetts S. S. Society.

GUARDIAN OF HEALTH. We have received volume VII, number 1, of the Guardian of Health. New series, edited by W. M. Cornell, M. D. LL. D. This journal was first published in 1846. Its object is to promote the health of the community. It is large octavo, double columns, of twenty-four pages, at the very cheap rate of one dollar a year. The last volume ended with the month of October, in order to begin the volume with the year, this number is dated in advance, January 1st, 1868. The present volume will be especially valuable, as it will contain the author's former work on Epilepsy and Nervous Diseases, a subject to which he has given much attention for many years. Address the editor, No. 4 Hayward Place, Boston.

THE QUESTION SETTLED. Those eminent men, Dr. James Clark, Physician to Queen Victoria, and Dr. Hughes Bennett, that case consumption can be cured. Dr. Wistar knew this when he discovered his now widely known BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and experience has proved the correctness of his opinion.

FROM A COTTAGE TO A THRONE. The Empress of Morocco is a native of Chaleh near Dole, in France, where she was born on the 20th of November, 1820, in a poor thatched cottage. Her name was Virginia St. Laurent. She went with her parents in 1843 to Algeria, and the whole family were then taken prisoners by the Moroccans. Her father was killed and her mother died a short time afterward. The captors, dazzled by the great beauty of Virginia, spared her, and, by a concurrence of romantic circumstances, the Emperor's son fell in love with her and made her his wife. This Empress has since sought out and brought her three sisters to the Moroccan Court, to which they are now attached.

There are at present six thousand pupers at Blackwell's Island, New York,—a larger number than for years.

Summary Intelligence.

Corn is selling at Austin, the capital of Texas, for forty cents per bushel. Cotton is said not to be in demand. "None of the merchants are buying except at ruinous figures for the planters." Some are offering only eight cents a pound for cotton in good order, and of fair staple.

The greatest number of old people in the United States are to be found in Massachusetts and Western North Carolina.

Some scamp last week started a story that the wife of a shoemaker in Brooklyn, N. Y., had given birth to four children at once, two boys and two girls, and since then the poor fellow's house has been run down by people of all classes anxious to see the "hinfant phenomenon." For two days there was a large crowd in front of his door, and he vows vengeance on the author of the hoax.

Great Britain will this year pay for a full supply of cotton, at least twenty million dollars less than she paid for one-third of a supply during the war.

Hay is ten dollars a ton and corn ninety cents a bushel in Minneapolis (Minn.) and the mills there are emptying bran into the river because it will not sell for a paying price.

A young lady in England found papa had put a check for $50,000 under her wedding breakfast plate.

The New Democrat Councils of Baltimore have refused to have their session opened with prayer, one bold member asserting that "preachers had done more harm than good, and had caused the late rebellion by their praying influence."

The population of Worcester, is estimated at 35,572, which makes it the second city in the State as regards population.

In the manufacture of steel pens at Birmingham 2500 persons are employed. The yearly product is over 725,000,000 pens, consuming about 5000 tons of steel.

In 1799 a man, his wife and six children removed from Virginia to Ohio, walking the whole distance, and the mother carrying an infant in her arms. She was present at a recent pioneer meeting in Newark, Ohio, having attained the age of 102 years.

Potatoes were quoted in Bangor, Me., on the 4th inst. at from 90 cents to $1 per bushel, an increase of five cents, on the previous week. Hay is selling at $10 to $17 for loose and $16 to $20 for good pressed. Choice table butter is plentiful at forty cents. Eggs are 35 cents per dozen.

The Lowell Courier says that though Adams and Liberty failed on the State ticket, both were elected to the House.

Organs were used in churches as early as the seventh century and were introduced in France in the year 815.

Rock crystal, clear enough for lenses, has been discovered in Arkansas. It has heretofore been imported from Brazil and Scotland, it not having been discovered in this country.

Mrs. Maria Starks, residing in Ontario County, New York, cut and harvested this season over twenty-five acres of wheat with her own hands. Her health improved immensely by the operation; she acquired the bronze complexion so fashionable just now in Paris, and is said to have gained fifty pounds of flesh.

Detectives have traced a lot of Italian beggars, who go about obtaining flour from the charitable, and found a depot in Boston where the flour is bartered and sold.

During the past season a single railcar carried north nearly nine million pounds of fruit raised in the southern part of Illinois. It was mostly strawberries and peaches.

The youngest member of the next House of Representatives is perhaps, John R. Bullard of Dedham, who is about 21 years of age, and at present a law student in the office of Messrs. Jewell, Gaston & Field, of Boston. Both the senior members of the above firm have been elected to the Legislature.—Mr. Jewell to the House, and Mr. Gaston to the Senate.

The friends of the late Ex-Gov. Andrew are engaged in raising a fund of $100,000, for the benefit of his family. At last accounts, some $60,000 had been subscribed, by Boston gentlemen exclusively; and there were confident expectations of speedily raising the subscription to $100,000.

The Post understands that Mr. E. E. Williamson, of Quincy, is a candidate for the place which Major Morissey holds at the State House.

The candidate for the Speakership of the next House of Representatives of Massachusetts, so far spoken of, are Mr. Harvey Jewell, Republican, and John Quincy Adams, Democrat.

At the French Exhibition there is a collection of thirteen hundred newspapers. Eugene Hatin, the author of a work upon the periodical press, states in La Liberte, that, according to a careful estimate, there are 12,500 newspapers now published in the world. In Europe, 7000; America, 5000; Asia, Africa, &c., 500. Their total daily circulation is estimated at twelve million sheets.

Austria makes 2500 tons of matches annually for exportation. In this country it is computed that we use over 300,000,000 daily, or 10 to each unit of our population.

DULL TIMES. It is stated that nine out of ten of the merchants in New York complain that they are not making money enough to pay clerk hire or store rent.

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH. It is stated that in a certain window in Broadway, New York, in an unobtrusive case of ordinary size and pattern, three hundred thousand dollars worth of diamonds are lying exposed to public view. This is the famous collection contributed by the ladies of the South to aid the rebellion and is to be used by the Gettysburg Association in the raising of funds for the enterprise of founding a home for crippled soldiers on the battlefield at that place.

A couple were recently married in Braintree, and it was shortly afterwards discovered that the groom was the husband of another wife in Europe. A legal investigation is in progress.

The wholesale dry goods business has never been as at present in Boston. Cottons that were selling one year ago for 25 cents, fail now to get purchasers at 10 cents. We advise housekeepers to buy woolen blankets for $3 per pair which were selling some months since for $10. Look out for failures the present month.—Boston Gazette.

Snow fell in Wisconsin on the 29th of October. In Virginia on the 31st of the same month.

The Subscriber wishes to return his many thanks to the public of Quincy and vicinity, for the liberal patronage bestowed upon him within the past four years, and would state that he is now better prepared than ever to furnish good music, where it is required, having secured the services of Mr. George Monk, who is a first class violinist, and whose talent is too widely known to need comment.—All orders should be made to R. G. Elliott, George Monk, B. Watson, or J. Paine.

FURS.

E. R. CLEAVELAND & CO.,
No. 12 Tremont Row,

OFFER THIS SEASON
AN EXTENSIVE

Most Attractive Stock
of Ladies' Dress Furs,

Comprising almost every kind and quality that fashion and comfort call to use, exhibiting a collection of

RICH AND RARE FURS,
which, for fineness of texture, beauty of shade, and thoroughness of finish, cannot be surpassed.

Of the great variety claiming the attention of buyers, a few of the leading and most popular kinds may be mentioned.

SIBERIAN SQUIRREL,

the prevailing Fur for a low price, being worn to an extent nearly equal to that of all other kinds combined. Its cheapness as well as fitness for comfort and ornament, will keep it in common use for a long time. We have some of the best skins ever imported from Russia, beautifully manufactured into a variety of styles and sizes to meet the wants of all.

Ordinary sized Collars and Muffs range in price from $12 to $25.00 per set.
We are closing off a small lot at a

Very Low Price

to get them out of the way before the Winter trade commences.

FITCH

is a staple Fur, and has been in use a length of time beyond the memory of the "oldest inhabitant." Its well known RICHNESS and DURABLENESS will make it always desirable to those wishing a set of Furs for a lifetime. It is probably the most economical Fur to buy. Muffs of the best quality cost from $12.00 to $16.00; Collars and Victorines from $20.00 to $50.00, according to size. Poorer qualities may be obtained at much less rates. We have a

LARGE STOCK OF FITCH

and have marked it at

EXTREMELY LOW PRICES.

Royal Ermine

is an elegant Fur, and the most valuable when pure white, and of a fine silky texture. It has been used principally for an evening Fur, but is now quite fashionable for the street. Collars and Muffs are worth from $35.00 to $65.00. The whole skin Ermine Ties are worth $7.00 to $12.00.

AMERICAN SABLE

is the most popular of the more expensive kinds and is the best Fur to buy where durability and richness of style is considered. It shades from a light brown to nearly a black. We have some of the FINEST and DARKEST SKINS of this Sable, and can satisfy the taste of the most fastidious in this kind of goods. LINES

ADDRESSED TO AUGUSTA C. HARDWICK,
on the death of her Father.

Your Father is gone,
Yes, gone from your sight;
But yet he still lives,
In the regions of light.

He has patiently waited
For the summons to come,
Which would tear him from
To that bright happy home,

Where loved ones are waiting
To see him released
From the trials of earth
To that sweet land of peace.

Loved companions have long
Been watching his steps,
To be ready when called,
His path to direct,

To the sweet fields beyond,
Where the cool waters flow,
And cool his fevered brow.

You are now a lone orphan,
No Father to share
The trials of life,
Which you'll oft have to bear.

But may those dear Brothers,
The trials of life,
Which you'll oft have to bear.

May they guard and protect you,
From the rough storms of life;
From the slanders of men,
Of which this world is rife.

May they throw wide around you
The mantle of love;
For loved ones are watching,
And throw in her path,
Their sweetest smiles, N. W.

That Daughter, who now
On life's ocean is tossed,
With a frail bark to carry,
Her burdens across,
The billows of life,
Which oft sweep the mariner
Beneath their control.

O, Parents in Heaven,
Watch over thy child;
And throw in her path,
Thy sweetest smiles, N. W.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS. The same
God who moulded the sun and kindled
the stars, watches the flight of the insect.

He who balances the clouds and lung the earth upon nothing notices the fall of the sparrow. He who gave Saturn his rings and placed the moon like a ball of silver
in the broad arch of heaven, gives the rose leaf its delicate tint, and made the distant sun to nourish the violet. And the same Being notices the praises of the cherubim and the prayers of the little children.

PROFITS OF ADVERTISING. A dealer who advertised with us two years since
to the amount of fifty dollars told us a few days since that as near as he could calculate he had realized eighteen hundred dollars from the transaction. Perhaps it is not often that the circumstances admit
of anything like an accurate calculation
of the profits of advertising, yet experience has demonstrated beyond question
that they are very large. Leicester Journal.

He that sedulously attends, point-
edly asks, calmly speaks, coolly answers,
and ceases when he has no more to say,
is in possession of some of the best requisites in man. Lavater.

The happy may not always be good, but the good are not always happy.
Wickedness oftentimes contrives to have about the biggest quantity of sunshine
there is out of doors, and to brouse in the tallest and largest fields of clover.

One of the Siamese twins was drafted by the rebels during the late war,
but was at last declared exempt on account of having an only brother depending on him for support.

It is the vice of the unlearned to suppose that the knowledge of books is of no account, and the vice of scholars to think there is no other knowledge worth having.

A chap out West, who had been severely afflicted with palpitation of the heart, says he found instant relief by the application of another palpitating heart to the part affected.

At a camp meeting, the officiating clergyman suddenly called out—"If the lady with blue hat, red hair, and cross
eyes don't stop talking, she will be pointed out to the congregation."

"Steel your heart," said a considerate father to his son, "for you are now going among some fascial girls." "I had much rather steel theirs," said the unpromising young man.

"That's a pretty go," said the husband when his beautiful wife ran away
from him.

Person once returned, with the manuscript of a friend, the answer, that it would be read when Homer and Virgil

Miscellan y.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH FOR HER.

The ancestors of the good people of the United States went to that country ostensibly to escape the persecutions of aristocratic England, but alas! for the inconsistency of human nature they were very far from abandoning aristocracy when they left the Mother Country. They took it with them, together with all its accompanying notions and absurdities, and have left it to their children as an inalienable legacy, which they seem to be trying to increase every day.

In the days of the good colony of Virginia, the distinctions between rich and poor were based upon laws which, like those of the Medes and Persians, altered
not. One of the most devout followers of this code was a wealthy planter, living
in what was known as the Northern Neck.
He was in all other respects a frank, open hearted, manly gentleman; but his estimate of his fellow men was founded upon
the principles that governed his selection of his horses—blood. Wealth, too, was by no means an unimportant feature with him. He had our human weakness, and like all of us, was influenced more than he ever believed by pounds, shillings and pence.

This Mr. G— had quite a large family, among them was a daughter, whose beauty was the standing toast of the country. She was just eighteen, and bounding into lovely womanhood. Not only was she beautiful in person, but her amiable disposition and many accomplishments
made her more than ordinarily attractive,
and half the gentlemen of Northern Neck
were sighing for her love.

There was in the country at this time
a young man who was already rising in the esteem of his neighbors. He came of a good family, but was, as yet, a poor
young surveyor, who had taught himself
his profession, and who had spent much of his time in traversing unknown forests,
with nothing but his compass for his guide
and his chain for his companion, locating lands and settling disputed titles. He was a model of manly beauty and excelled in all the various feats of strength
in which the old-time Americans took such pride. He was calm, and reserved, and there was about him a dignified
sweetness of demeanor that accorded well with his frank independence of character. He was a great favorite with all who knew him, and there was no gathering to which he was not asked.

Mr. G— seemed especially to like the young man, and it was not long before he insisted that the latter should abandon all ceremony in his visits to him, and come and go when he pleased. The invitation was heartily given, and as promptly accepted. The young man liked the planter, and he found the society of the beautiful Mary G— a very strong attraction. The result was that he was frequently at the planter's residence; so frequently, indeed, that Mrs. G— felt called upon to ask her husband if he did not think it wrong to permit him to enjoy such unreserved intercourse with their daughter. The father laughed at the idea, and said he hoped his daughter knew her position too well to allow anything like love for a poor surveyor to blind her to her duty to her family.

Nevertheless, Mary G— was not so fully impressed with this conviction of duty as her father. She found more to admire in the poor surveyor than in all her wealthy aristocratic suitors; and also, before she knew it, her heart passed out of her keeping, and was given to him.

She loved him with all the honesty and devotion of her pure heart; and she would have thought it a happiness to go out with him into the back woods and share his fatigues and troubles, no matter how much sorrow they might bring to her.

Nor did she love in vain. The young man, whose knowledge of the world was afterwards so great, had not then learned to consider as binding the distinctions
which society drew between his position and that of the lady. He knew that in all that makes a man, in integrity and honesty of purpose, he was the equal of any
one. He believed that except in wealth, he stood upon a perfect equality with Mary G—, and he loved her honestly and manfully, and no sooner had he satisfied himself upon the state of his own feelings than he confessed his devotion,
simply and truthfully, and received from the lady's lips the assurance that she loved him very dearly.

Scornful to occupy a doubtful position,
or to cause the lady to conceal aught from her parents, the young man frankly and manfully asked Mr. G— for his daughter's hand. Very angry grew the planter
as he listened to the audacious proposal.
He stormed and swore furiously, and denounced the young man as an ungrateful
and insolent upstart.

"My daughter has always been accustomed to ride in her carriage," he said,
"Who are you, sir?"

"A gentleman, sir," replied the young man, quickly, and he left the house.

The lovers were parted. The lady married soon after a wealthy planter, and the young man went out again into the world to battle with his heart and conquer his unhappy passion. He subdued
it, but although he afterwards married a woman whom he loved honestly and truthfully, and who was worthy of his love, he was never wholly dead to his first love.

The time passed on, and the young man began to reap the reward of his labors. He had never been to the house of Mr. G—
since his cruel repulse by the planter;
but the latter could not forget him, as his name soon became familiar in every Virginia household. Higher and higher he rose every year, until he had gained a position from which he could look down upon the poor planter. Wealth came to him, too. When the great struggle for independence dawned, he was in his prime,
a happy husband, and one of the most distinguished men in America. The struggle went on, and soon the "poor surveyor"
held the highest and proudest position in the land.

When the American army passed in triumph through the streets of Williams-
burgh, the ancient capital of Virginia,
after the surrender of Cornwallis, the officer riding at the head of the column
chanced to glance up at a neighboring balcony, which was crowded with ladies.
Recognizing one of them, he raised his hat and bowed profoundly. There was a commotion in the balcony, and some one called for water, saying Mrs. Lee had fainted. Turning to a young man who rode near him, the officer said gravely:

"Henry, I fear your mother has fainted.
You had better leave the column and go to her."

The speaker was George Washington,
once the "poor surveyor," but then commander-in-chief of the armies of the United States. The young man was Col.
Henry Lee, the commander of the famous "Light Cavalry Legion;" the lady was his mother, and formerly Miss G—,
the belle of the "Northern Neck."

For the Patriot.

PARKER PILSBURY ON SUFFRAGE.

Mr. Pillsbury in an address delivered before the American Equal Rights Association in New York, in his peculiar and original style, gave utterance to the following thoughts on the right of negroes
and women to the ballot box:

"The right of the black man to a voice
in the government was not earned at Oleuste or Port Hudson; it was when his life began, not when life was paid for it under the battle axe of war. It was his with Washington and Jefferson, James Birchman and Abraham Lincoln. Not one of them could ever produce a higher and holier claim. Now can any of us."

And in the plenitude of our generosity
we even propose to extend the gift to woman also. It is proposed to make educated, cultivated, refined, loyal tax-paying,
government obeying women, equal to the servants who groom their horses and scour
their pots and pans of her kitchen.

"Unfortunately beings, without property,
and scarcely knowing the English tongue,
or any other, are entreated to grant to women, the superior of all the queens
of the Old World, the right to co-operate with them in the affairs of State!"

Women here in New York, worth thousands and hundreds of thousands in gold,
and whose money is the meaneast part of their real value in society, are humbly petitioning their coachesmen, their footmen and gardeners, the discharged State Prison convicts, the idiots and lunatics,—all of whom may, and often do, exercise the right of the ballot, to permit them also to share with them in making and executing the laws.

Our Maria Mitchell, our Harriet
Hosmer, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Lydia Maria Childs, and Lucretia Mott, with millions of the mothers and matrons of quiet home, where they preside with quietly dignity and grace, are begging of besotted, debauched white male citizens,
legal voters, soaked in whiskey, immersed
in tobacco, and parboiled in every damnable vice and sin, to recognize them also as human, and graciously accord to them the rights of intelligent beings."

WHAT YOU CAN NEVER CATCH.

Boys and girls, what is it you can never catch, though you chase after it as on the wings of the wind?

You can never catch the word that has gone out of your lips. Once spoken, it is out of your reach; do your best, you can never recall it.

Therefore, take care what you say.
Never speak an unkind word, an impure
word, a lying word, a profane word.

AUTUMN DAYS.

When Autumn days come, Nature,
like a retired merchant, changes its manner—from thrift and bustling industry to languid leisure and to ostentatious luxury.

The sun rises later and sets earlier than when it had all the summer crops on hand and was playing universal husband-
man. There is no nest-building now, and no bird-singing,—which is a purely domestic arrangement, designed on the birds' part to keep peace in the family
while the children are being raised, and laid aside as soon as the young birds are off their hands. Morning comes low and moist places. The sun plays with them, but they perish in his arms.

A few belated flowers yet keep watch, but chiefly the asters, which fringe the fields,
star the edges of forests, and like a latecomer at a feast, seem bent upon making up lost time. At night, crickets and katy-

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1867.

"Forn to no Master, of no Sect are We."

TAKE NOTICE. According to our custom on Thanksgiving week, we shall publish the Patriot on Wednesday next, so as to give our printers a chance to enjoy the day to its fullest extent, at their family gatherings. Our advertising patrons will please hand in their favors on Tuesday next, or very early on Wednesday morning.

HORSE RAILROAD MEETING. A meeting of the citizens of Quincy was held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening last, to consider the subject of aid to the Quincy Horse Railroad Company. J. Q. Adams, Esq., was called to the Chair, and William B. Duggan appointed Secretary. Interesting statements were made concerning the history and financial condition of the Company by its former President, George Eaton, Esq. His remarks were followed by those from Dr. Wm. B. Duggan, Lyman S. Richards, and others. It was finally recommended that a Town Meeting of the citizens of Quincy be called, that the town might consider in its corporate capacity, what action would be deemed proper to contain this most useful source of accommodation to the public travel in continued operation and on a permanent basis. The meeting was well attended, and a good feeling prevailed in favor of sustaining the road.

THE STATE OF THE COUNTRY. The elections being all over, and the position of political parties more clearly defined, the country seems to have settled down into a calm, the people for the present eschewing politics, for things of more personal concern. Congress is now in session, and with their legislative duties, and President making it is thought it will be a protracted and exciting one. But of this we have no desire to speak at the present time, we have matters of more importance at home, which interest us. We have reference to the public improvements which are going on, especially in highways, and particularly in Hancock street, which has been greatly improved recently. It has been widened between eight and nine feet, its uneven places, leveled some two or three feet, and that "awful place" (the Hollow) raised about a very neat and passable piece of road.

The culvert, also, at Webb's Brook, has been enlarged, to afford better drainage to the street. The granite engine company, which has long been needed. The owners and occupants of real estate on both sides of the road, whose property has suffered by the alterations that are being made, are beginning to realize their situation, and to become reconciled to the change. And a few, are carrying the improvements still farther. The Messrs. Tirrell & Sons are erecting a large two-story building for their business; eighty feet in front, on the street, and thirty-five in depth, with a spacious attic. The first floor will be occupied as a wheelwright, and saddle and harness makers' shop, and the second, by Mr. Felch as a paint shop. Mr. Horace S. Felch, having purchased the good will of the horse-shoeing and farrier business of the Messrs. Tirrell, will, also, resume it, under more favorable circumstances, at a shop which he has fitted up expressly for the purpose. See his advertisement.

THANKSGIVING. The Executive of the Nation and of the State, the Centre and the Hub, have both spoken on the subject, and given very cogent reasons why the day should be generally observed. They have done their duty, it now remains for the public to do theirs, which they seem inclined to do.

The Granite Engine Company, and Quincy Brass Band have struck the key note and set the music for the occasion. The former will lead off in a grand ball, at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 27th, and the band on the evening following, Thanksgiving night. Ample arrangements have been made for all to participate; and the attractions are such, that there is no doubt the day will be opened and closed with brilliant success.

TIN WEDDING. The assembly at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Underwood, (of the firm of Taylor, Underwood, and Eaton, of the Municipal Board,) on Friday evening last to commemorate the twenty anniversary of their marriage, was one of those social gatherings that one delights to participate in. About fifty of our most solid men and women were present, who in testimony of their esteem, and in commemoration of the occasion brought with them articles of tin ware of almost every description, not forgetting a valuable dinner horn. After an exchange of congratulations, the company sat down to a sumptuous repast, and the golden moments flew swiftly in social enjoyment. This is the second degree of our young friends in their A. B. C. of matrimonial experience, may the advent of the third be attended with equally propitious circumstances.

FURS. Ladies about purchasing furs should at once examine the large and attractive assortment offered by E. R. Cleaveland, 12 Tremont Row, which embraces all the fashionable furs worn, manufactured into cloaks, sacks, muffs and collars. Gentlemen desiring fur coats, caps, gloves and sleigh robes should at once give them a call, as we can assure them that they will find this to be one of the most reliable places to trade in the city.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

Boston, Nov. 21, 1867.

The National Finances.—General Butler and Thaddeus Stevens.—Charles Dickens.—Extract from Carleton's Letter on the Banquet to Dickens in London.—Enthusiastic reception in Boston.

The business record of the week shows no favorable change. Monetary affairs very uncheerful. Telegrams from New York report a sudden advance in call loans in that city at 9 per cent. Here it is less; as there is a light demand for money for mercantile purposes, and the fear of a greater stringency is quite prevalent. In business enterprise the week has been dull, with a prospect of continual inactivity. The financial schemes of Gen. Butler and Thaddeus Stevens, to pay off our public debt in greenbacks, is a gentle hint in favor of repudiation. The views of these gentlemen have taken all honest men by surprise. No wonder the holders of American securities in Europe are alarmed by reading the speeches of Butler and Stevens on our finances. Another subject agitated, is the taxation of Government bonds. Now if the Government can falsify its pledges in this particular, why should it not refuse to pay the gold interest payable on certain bonds, or indeed, repudiate the bonds themselves, principal and interest? The principle involved in either case is the same.

The simple truth is, that we have two thousand five hundred millions of dollars. Some portion payable in the currency of the country, and some in gold, and the indebtedness matures. The periods of partial payments are stretched from the present time to some future years hence. So far, to the honor and credit of the nation, all payments due have been promptly met in good faith, and this should be the true policy of our government. Any step towards repudiation would lead to the most dangerous results.

Charles Dickens is at the Parker House, arriving here at midnight on Tuesday from Liverpool. The morning papers of yesterday give a glowing account of his reception by the Bostonians. At fifty-six in February next, he is looking remarkably well. Carleton says of him, "He has been a hard worker. As Mr. Dickens himself has said, he had neither influence or money to aid him,—by genius alone he has risen,—genius wearing itself out over the midnight lamp,—the pen transferring the pictures of the brain to paper,—to printer's ink, that all the world might be happier and better. Though time has robbed his cheeks of their former freshness; though he has given himself day and night to unremitting labor,—severe and prolonged,—there has been no loss of humor. It plays over his countenance in sunny gleams,—lights up his mild blue eyes, and dispels all care. You are reminded of Prior's lines:

"The Sun's dark cottage, battered and decayed, Leans in low light through chinks which time has made."

No greeting could be more cordial than that which he gives his friends—and there are few men who have more than he. The poor are his friends. Not only does his friendship reach them through his publications, but many a poor man, low down in life, has had a helping hand from him. He has brought sun-light into many a cottage, if report speaks true. Like the Gulf Stream of the Ocean, flowing ever onward, through tempest and storm, tempering far off wintry climates,—and spreading its influence over land and sea, so are all honest efforts of men in behalf of the poor and lonely; and if, as singing the children at Sunday school, "kind words never die, nor kind acts ever lose their power," what shall be the measure and duration of Christmas Carol? There have been more plum puddings, more joints of roast beef in the houses of the poor,—warmer fires in the grates, fewer tears,—less heartache, and more good cheer, than of late years. It is a good thing, that the expression of the poor, and the expression of the rich, should be the same.

What a beautiful picture of Dickens, and probably not too high or gilded. x.

Mr. Daniels, billiard champion of Massachusetts, has issued a challenge to the champions of any State past or present, to play him a game of 1500 points for $250 a side.

CHIEF JUSTICE BIGELOW. Nearly three hundred gentlemen, principally connected with the Massachusetts bar, have joined in the following solicitation, which has been sent to Chief Justice Bigelow:

"Sir: We the undersigned, have heard with regret that you contemplate resigning the Chief Justiceship of the Commonwealth. Knowing how ably and acceptably you have filled that high position, and feeling that your retirement at this time would be a loss to the Bench, which the profession and the public could ill bear, we hope that this expression of our earnest wish that you should continue in office may have some influence upon your determination."

BALLOU'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE. This very popular and exceedingly cheap Magazine presents an attractive table of contents for December. The illustrations are remarkably good, making this one of the best numbers of BALLOU ever issued.

The publishers offer unusual attractions for the coming year. With the January number, the Magazine will be enlarged to one hundred pages, and several new and attractive features introduced, and will eclipse its present excellence, while the extraordinary low price is retained. It is only $1.50 per year, or 15 cents a number. Clubs receive it for $1.25. The proprietors have good cause for calling it "the cheapest magazine in the world." Published by Elliot, Thomas & Talbot, Boston, Mass.

Elliot White, Esq., of Braintree, prominently connected with railroad, banking and insurance matters in this part of the state, died at his residence on the 12th inst.

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD. Don't forget to attend the public meeting called for Wednesday afternoon, at the Lyceum Room, to take into consideration the affairs of this road, and see what measures it is best to adopt, to keep it in running order, and secure to the community in future, its usefulness. The presence of all is required. See warrant in another column.

THE EVERETT STATUE. A bronze statue in honor of Edward Everett, was erected in the Public Garden, Boston, without ceremony, at sunrise, on Monday morning last. The statue itself is nine feet high, and represents Mr. Everett, with his right hand raised, the shoulders thrown back and the head erect as if in the act of speaking, and was prepared, by the artist, W. W. Story. The sum of nearly thirty-three thousand dollars having been contributed by the wealthy citizens of Boston and vicinity, it was voted—first, to erect a statue on the Public Garden; second, to procure a bust to be placed in the public library; and third, to place his portrait in Faneuil Hall; so we now have three memorials of this great statesman, in bronze, marble, and canvas. His statue is the fifth, which has been erected in Boston in honor of distinguished citizens.

PETITION TO THE GOVERNOR. A petition has been presented to Gov. Bullock for the pardon of those citizens of Massachusetts who are now imprisoned for violations of the prohibitory liquor law. The petition is signed by A. O. Brewster, William Schouler, Josiah G. Abbott, N. B. Bryant, Charles L. Woodbury, Thomas M. Hayes and others, and compliance with the petition is urged on the ground that voters of the State have by a very large majority recently pronounced against the law under which these men are detained from liberty.

The petitioners also urge that the law in question "has engendered more disturbance, litigation and indignation among our people than any other statute for the last half century;" that it has been unduly enforced ever since its enactment; that it has brought suffering and disgrace into many families, and that the only way to carry out the manifest will of the people, is to promptly and without delay, restore to liberty all these persons "who are now serving sentences for mere violation of our so-called liquor statutes."

Mr. John T. Lanigan, has taken a shop at Neponset, for the manufacture of boots and shoes,—repairing, etc. All orders left at his house, on Quincy Avenue, opposite Liberty street, will be thankfully received, and meet with prompt attention.

It has been in the shop of Mr. Felch, on Coddington street, for a few days, and appears in some of that gentleman's brightest colors.

John S. Fogg, Esq., president of the Weymouth Agricultural Society, has generously offered to contribute $3000 toward the erection of the new hall about to be built by the society.

THE BIGGEST PEDESTRIAN FEAT. The Chicago Post of last Saturday says: John Shepherd, who is a well-known pedestrian, was backed to walk to New Orleans in twenty days for a stake of $2000, Michael Thompson, of Buffalo, waging his money on the time. Shepherd will probably start from the Court-House square on Tuesday morning next, accompanied by his witnesses. He will have to do some smart walking to accomplish his object, as the distance is 1500 miles, and he will be obliged to average seventy-five miles a day. Shepherd is a young man twenty-nine years of age, and weighs 170 pounds.

which, for fineness of texture, beauty of shade, and thoroughness of finish, cannot be surpassed.

Of the great variety claiming the attention of buyers, a few of the leading and most popular kinds may be mentioned.

SIBERIAN SQUIRREL,

the prevailing Fur for a low price, being worn to an extent nearly equal to that of all other kinds combined. Its cheapness as well as fineness for comfort and ornament, will keep it in common use for a long time. We have some of the best skins ever imported from Russia, beautifully manufactured into a variety of styles and sizes to meet the wants of all.

Ordinary sized Collars and Muffs range in price from $12 to $25.00 per set.

We are closing off a small lot at a

to get them out of the way before the Winter trade commences.

FITCH

is a staple Fur, and has been in use a length of time by the memory of the "oldest inhabitant." Its well known RICHNESS and DURABLENESS will make it always desirable to those wishing a set of Furs for a life time. It is probably the most economical Fur to buy. Muffs of the best quality cost from $12.00 to $16.00; Collars and Veilings from $20.00 to $26.00, according to size. Fourer qualities may be obtained at much less rates. We have a

and have marked it at

EXTREMELY LOW PRICES.

Royal Ermine

is an elegant Fur, and the most valuable when pure white, and of a fine silky texture. It is worn principally by the aristocracy. Collars and Muffs are worth from $35.00 to $65.00. The best skin Ermine Furs are worth $7.00 to $12.00.

AMERICAN SABLE

is the most popular of the more expensive kinds and is the best Fur to buy where durability and richness of style is considered. It sheds from a light brown, or nearly a black. We have some of the FINEST and DARKEST SKINS of this Sable, and can satisfy the taste of the most fastidious in this kind of goods.

Prices for Collars and Muffs vary from $15.00 to $25.00; Half Capes $30.00 to $45.00; Muffs alone are worth one-third to one-half the price of a set.

HUDSON BAY SABLE

is similar in appearance to the Russian Sable, and is considered even more beautiful by many. We have some very choice goods made from this Fur, and purchasers should compare our qualities and price before buying.

RUSSIAN SABLE

is the most costly of all Furs. It is long, thick, and fine and of a rich dark color, thickly interspersed with white. We have Muffs ranging in value from $65.00 to $150.00; Collars from $75.00 to $300.00.

We desire our patrons to bear in mind that we warrant every Sable sold by us

MAKING YELLOW BUTTER IN WINTER.

Cows that are required to subsist on straw, in which no green thing can be discovered, cannot furnish milk that will make yellow butter. Hay, whether it be made of clover, timothy, or any other grass that was allowed to stand until dead ripe before cutting, will not be suitable feed for producing yellow butter. White turnips, buckwheat bran, or even wheat bran and shorts will not furnish material for yellow butter. Many persons, aware of this fact, have mingled other, or other coloring matter into the butter, to give it a golden color. But this is not the correct way to make yellow butter. Better by far feed carrots to the cows than to mingle them with the cream.

No difficulty is ever experienced in making yellow butter when cows have access to grass. If the grass were cut and cured properly, little if any of the butter-producing material will be lost during the process of curing. Therefore, if grass be cut at the most proper time of making the best quality of hay, it will produce yellow butter, quite as well as if consumed before it was made into hay. It is the quality of feed that makes butter yellow or white, more than the color of the grass. It is not denied that the milk of some cows will make much whiter butter than others, when they all subsist on the same kind of feed. The management of the milk and cream, also, will exert nearly as much influence in producing yellow butter as the quality and kind of feed.

If a good cow having a yellowish skin be fed with first quality of red clover hay, that appears as green and fragrant as when it came from the meadow, and on corn-stalks that have not been bleached to a light brown color, and with a few quarts of yellow Indian corn daily, with some carrots or turnips, and potatoes or cabbage-leaves, and if proper cleanliness be observed in milking, and in the management of the cream, yellow butter can be produced in winter almost as well as during the grazing season. Still, slops, dish-water, and swill, which will increase the quantity of milk, will not make yellow butter.

The cream requires excellent care in cold weather, and should be churned at least twice every week. When cream is exposed to changes of heat and cold for several days, the butter is apt to be white as lard.—Independent.

Two great lacks in agriculture, are information and carelessness. The most pressing and immediate deficiency is in the latter, the remedy of which cannot be too strongly enforced upon the attention of farmers and cultivators everywhere. Hoedfulness may take a sure step towards success; negligence walks ship-should to poverty.

Bone meal is highly recommended for cows by those who have tried it.

Incidents.

"Sambo, have you fed the pigs?"
"Yes, massa, me fed 'em," replied Sambo.
"Did you count them?"
"Yes, massa, me count them all but one; dere be one little speckled pig, he frisked about so much me couldn't count him."

A man boasted of having eaten forty-nine hard-boiled eggs. "Why didn't you eat one more and make an even fifty?" asked Sambo.
"Do you want a man to make a hog of himself just for one egg?"

A certain cockney, overcome by his sensibilities, fainted at the grave of his fourth spouse.
"What shall we do with him?" asked a perplexed friend of his.
"Let him alone," said a wagging bystander, "he'll soon re-live."

Freddy, a fair-haired youngster of four summers, after being for sometime lost in thought, broke out thus: "Pa, can God do anything?"
"Yes, dear."
"Can he make a two year old colt in two minutes?"
"Why, he would not wish to do that, Freddy."
"But if he did wish to could he?"
"Yes, certainly, if he wished to."
"What in two minutes?"
"Yes, in two minutes."
"Well, then, he wouldn't be two years old, would he?"

Poetry.

WHAT I HATE.

I hate the toothache, when with maddening
jump,
Like torments wild it raves among the stumps;
I hate the whole dire catalogue of aches,
Distempers, fevers hot, and ague shaks.

I hate mad dogs, snakes, dandies, seas and bugs,
Ten-parties, wild-cats, toads, and whiskey jugs,
Hard times, bad roads, spoiled fish, and broken
banks,
Stale news, cold soup, light parse, and lawyers'
thinks.

I hate long stories, and short ends of corn,
A costly farm-house, and a shabby barn;
More curs than pigs, no books, but many guns;
Bore toes, tight shoes, old debts, and paper duns.

I hate tight-lacing, and dull conversation,
Abundant gab, and little information;
The fool that sings in bed, and snores in meeting,
Who laughs while talking, and talks much while eating.

FLAXSEED SYRUP. This excellent

remedy for a cough is made thus:—Boil

one ounce of flaxseed in a quart of water

for half an hour; strain and add to the

liquid the juice of two lemons and half a pound of rock candy. If the cough is accompanied by weakness and a loss of appetite, add half an ounce of powdered gum arabic. Set this to simmer for half an hour, stirring it occasionally. Take a wine-glass full when the cough is troublesome.

CARAMEL. Take five pounds of sugar, one of chocolate, one quart of cream,
not milk, fifty cents worth of vanilla.

Cook an hour and a half, and stir all the while, to prevent burning.

TO SAVE OIL. Put the wick into the lamp, and fill the latter about half full of coarse salt, and then put in an inch of oil and it will be found that great savings will be the result. The salt

washes away gradually during the burning, and must therefore be renewed from time to time. The light is purer and more brilliant than that without, and the

wick needs no trimming.

Men talk idly about empire, nation, family. The foundation of the empire is the nation, of the nation is the family, the family is the individual; in fine, government is founded on the people,

the people on the family, the family on its chief.

A modest individual in the Nutmeg State announces that his golden wedding will come off just thirty years
from now, and offers a liberal discount
on any presents his friends may design
to make him.

Mr. Pitt, at Kidderminster, gave the following toast in compliment to the manufacturers: "May the trade of Kidderminster be trianpled under foot by all the world."

To confound wealth with happiness is to mistake the means for the end.
You might as well fancy that a knife and fork would give you an appetite. The smallest compliment we receive from another confers more pleasure than the biggest compliment we pay to ourselves.
Most fashions are ridiculous; but we are obliged to fall into the ridicule to avoid appearing more ridiculous.

The average weight of the male brain is three pounds, eight ounces; of the female, two pounds, four ounces. Yet
a pound of steel is stronger than a ton of soap. Weight isn't strength or fineness.

Philosophers have speculated as to whether men become beasts after death,
but let us reflect how often they make beasts of themselves before it.

The Boston Journal says, with regard to stubborn pens: "If a steel pen is too stiff, stick it into a gas flame for a few seconds, then dip it into water, oil or tallow. If a new pen is greasy, put it in the flame for an instant and the ink will run."

The small things of life are often
of more importance than the great; the slow than the quick; the still than the noisy.

In the physical world there is but little territory left to discover, but there are vast multitudes who have yet to discover that they own their own souls.

There is an old saying that a
"fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind."
But that is not always the case. When we find a fellow feeling for our watch,
we are by no means inclined to be won-derous kind.

Once at Wotton, Rowland Hill
was preaching in the afternoon, the only time when it seemed possible to be drow-ny under him. He saw some sleeping, and paused, saying, "I have heard that the miller can sleep while the mill is going,
but if the mill stops it wakes him; I'll try this method." And so he sat down and soon saw an aroused audience.

Youth and the lark have their song
for the morning, while age and the nightingale have theirs in the evening.

"I love thee still," as the quiet
husband said to the chattering wife.

A desire to say things which no
one ever said, makes some people say things which nobody ought to say.

Miscellany.

THE LITTLE BROWN COTTAGE.

Away back in the country far from the busy cares of life there stood a little brown cottage. Its owner had slept for over thirty years, but still the little cottage stands unoccupied. The little garden that used to be kept in such neat order has grown to weeds and thistles. The woodbine that climbed over the door is leafless
and dead, still the little cottage stands unchanged, except that now and then a square of glass is broken by some rude
school boy.

Shall I tell you the history of the owner of that cottage? He was about the same age as myself: we attended the same school, and at the age of nineteen we entered the same college, and after three years close application to study, we both entered the world for ourselves. My friend bought the cottage before spoken
of, and settled down in the ministry.

For years he toiled with no object but to serve his God. Each Sabbath found him pleading for the people, but there came a change.

One Sabbath there entered his little church a young lady; how shall I describe her to you! those dark mellow eyes, that sweet firm expression of her mouth, that rich melodious voice, stole to the heart of my friend.

Mabel Loring, the daughter of one of the richest men in New York had come to this quiet country place to recruit
her health, and pay her relations a visit.

On this Sabbath entered the little church, again and again through those long summer months, she entered that humble place of worship. Sabbath after Sabbath found her listening to the humble preaching of Edward Lawrenson, until suddenly the truth flashed upon her mind
that she loved him.

She! daughter of one of the richest merchants of New York, loved an unknown country preacher. One that regarded her as no more than any one of the rest of that numerous congregation. She who had hundreds kneel, and solicit the honors of her land, and turned from them,
now loved a country minister. And what of Edward, did he regard her with no different opinion from the rest? Go ask of those sleepless hours that find him
walking his room, wringing his hands in the agony of despair. He, a poor preacher, dare not aspire to the hand of Mabel Loring, dare not attempt to win her affection, for, even if he should succeed, what had he to give in exchange for all she must leave for him. What would her proud old father say. His only daughter, his much loved Mabel, the idol of his heart, the wife of a country preacher. No, no, not that, and for once Edward Law-
renson's proud heart rebelled.

Why was it his lot to toil for a people
with no recompense save his daily bread,
while thousands around were enjoying the luxuries of life. Why had his lot been so different.

"Oh, Mabel, Mabel, why did I ever see you. Why did you ever come to this place, then I should never have known you;" and the young man bowed
his head upon his hands and wept.

So absorbed was he in his newly found grief that he did not hear the approach of foot-keepers; quietly and unobserved Mabel had entered his room slowly, and as he raised his head from his hands, the object of his wandering thoughts stood before him.

Hearing those words and seeing the strong man weep, the haughty Mabel lost
all self-control, and only cried: "Oh!
Edward, Edward," and Edward clasped
her in his arms, and with feverish haste told her all his love.

"Oh, why was I born so much beneath
you my only love."

"Oh Edward," she murmured, "would that I were so noble as you, that I might be near you ever, that you might learn me to be like you, but it cannot be. There is a barrier between us that cannot be surmounted; a deep gulf that never can be crossed; a few months more and I am to be the wife of one of the richest nobles
in that great city. My hand will be his!
Jewels will deck my brow, but my heart will be yours forever, Edward. I have pleaded, but in vain. My will is so slight and I sell myself for gold. O, that I was the daughter of some poor farmer,
then might I enjoy life and its blessings;
in a neat little cottage of my own, and oh!
how happy, but it must not be. I must wear away this weary life as best I can;
but when I am surrounded by every thing
that wealth can purchase, you will think of me sometimes, Edward? Think how much better and happier I would have been in this little cottage with you,—but think also, that God willed it otherwise.
You have learned me to trust him, and when trouble seems greater than I can bear I will go to him. I wish you a happy life, so good-bye until we meet in heaven, for we must meet no more on earth. To-morrow I start for the great city. In a few months I am lost to the world as Mabel Loring, so good-bye Edward," and she was gone.

The next day found her in her city
home, and all hearts were made happy by her return. A few months more I heard
she was married; but the heart that throbb-ed only for her had ceased to beat. Edward Lawrenson was dead. A few days after her marriage, glancing over the evening paper, she read the following paragraph: "Died suddenly of heart disease, Edward Lawrenson, pastor of the church at L—. We deeply lament his loss; he had ever been true to his calling, and we hope he will reap his reward in heaven."

The paper fell from her hand; the shock was too much and she fell to the floor. In an instant all was confusion. The stately

DYSPEPSIA!

There is no disease which experience has so amply proved to be remediable by the PERUVIAN SYRUP, (a protected solution of the Protosol of Iron,) as Dyspepsia.

The most inveterate forms of this disease have been completely cured by this medicine, as ample testimony of some of our first citizens prove.

From the VENERABLE ARCHDEACON SCOTT, D.D.

DEAR SIR, Canada East.

"I am an inveterate Dyspeptic of more than 25 years' standing."

"I have been so wonderfully benefited in the treatment, which I have used the Peruvian Syrup, that I can scarcely persuade myself of the reality. I have had no other medicine, and the change I am now making, and can but recommend to others that have had no success with any other."

ANOTHER ELEGANT WRITER, as follows:

"By usage in Europe is indisputably proved, that the 'Fountain of Health,' on this side of the Atlantic. These habits of Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the clasp of the Dyspepsia."

A pamphlet of 22 pages, containing a history of this remarkable remedy, with a treatise on "Iron as a medicine," will be sent free to any address.

Selected Poetry.

MAKE THE BEST OF IT.

Life is but a fleeting dream,
 Care destroys the zest of it;
 Swift it glides like a stream,
 Mind you make the best of it!
 Talk not of your weary woes,
 Troubles, or the rest of it,
 If we have but brief repose,
 Let us make the best of it.

If your friend has cast a heart,
 There is something deep in him;
 Cast away his darker part,
 Cling to what's divine in him.
 Friendship is our best relief,
 Make no heartless jest of it;
 If it brighten every grief,
 If we make the best of it.

Happiness depends on state;
 'Tis no such experiment,
 Simply that the wise and great
 May have joy and contentment.
 Rank is not the spell refined,
 Money's not the test of it.
 But a calm, contented soul,
 That will make the best of it.

Trusting in the Power above,
 Which, sustaining all in us,
 In one common bond of love,
 Binding great and small as;
 Whatsoever we befall,
 Sorrows or the rest of it,
 We shall overcome them all,
 If we make the best of it.

Farmers' Department.

THE FARMER'S GRINDSTONE.

There is no tool so essential to the farmer as a good grindstone; and a very correct idea may be formed of the management of the farm, by the appearance of this homely but useful article. If the neighboring saw or edge tool factory, has furnished one of its cast off "hubs," which is hung on a wooden shaft, and suspended in the crotch of a tree, or in a fence corner, you may rest assured that such a farm will not produce four hundred bushels of potatoes, or forty bushels of wheat to the acre. But such cases are rare, now-a-days, as this article has kept pace with the wonderful improvements in mowing machines and farming implements generally. The old fashioned, unsuspended stone, with square hole and uncertain grit, has been superseded by the finished stone, with self-adjusting shaft, friction rollers and treadle; so that one person can turn the stone, and grind any ordinary tool without assistance.

In olden times, the only grindstones in use came from Newcastle, in England, and although very good for some purposes, they were not suitable for farmers' use, the grit being too coarse. The Nova Scotia stones were next introduced, and found to be a great improvement on the Newcastle. The Ohio grindstones are very largely used by the farmers and others throughout the West; although our Pennsylvania farmers prefer a good blue Nova Scotia stone; but recently a most excellent article has reached us from the shores of Lake Huron, having a fine, sharp grit, leaving a fine edge and cutting prettily fast.

Hoping these remarks may induce our farmers to give this important tool the attention it deserves, a few hints how to put it in order may not be out of place. 1. Always keep your grindstone under cover, as exposure to the sun's rays hardens the grit and injures the frame. 2. Don't let the stone run in water, or stand in water when not used, as this causes soft places where none exist; but allow the water to drip from a water pot, (an old white lead keg will answer,) fixed above the stone, and stop it off when not grinding. 3. Clean off all greasy or rusty tools before sharpening; as grease or rust chokes up the grit; and always keep the stone perfectly round by racking it off when necessary; and finally, every farmer should have a good grindstone of his own, always ready for use, and no one should be so imprudent as to waste the cost of a stone by running to his neighbors to grind his tools.—Cor. Farm and Fireside.

HOW TO HAVE MEALY POTATOES.

Pare the raw potatoes and let them stand an hour or so in a basin of water, to which a pinch of salt has been added. Boil quickly, when done drain off the water carefully, and replace the potatoes upon the stove, in the same vessel in which they were cooked, to dry for five or ten minutes. When ready to serve, take each potato and squeeze it gently—but not enough to destroy the form—in a dry napkin, and place immediately on the table. The squeezing in the napkin takes out all the water and leaves the potatoes that before were wet and heavy, dry, mealy and delicious.

Inednotes.

An Oxonian borrowed two sovereigns of a brother collegian, promising soon to return them in some shape or other. "I should like to have them back as nearly as possible in the shape of two sovereigns," observed the lender; "and I trust you will not forget the old adage, 'he gives twice who gives kindly.'"

"Then we are quits," cried the borrower, instantly tossing back one of the sovereigns.

Abel Perkins, of S—, had a spite against Squire B—, of the same town. Some one remarked in his hearing one day that the Squire was a mean man.

"Mean," said Abel, "I guess he is. A yard of black tape would make him a suit of mourning and then he'd have enough left for a weed on his hat."

"Come here, sis," said a young gentleman to a little girl, whose sister he was paying his addresses; "you are the sweetest thing on earth."

"No, I ain't," she replied; sister says you are the sweetest."

The gentleman "popped the question" the next day.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

In the whole history of medical discovery no remedy has performed so many and such remarkable cures of the numerous affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, as this long-tried and justly celebrated Balsam. So generally acknowledged is the superior excellence of this remedy that but few of the many who have tested its virtues by experience fail to speak of it as a specific and certain cure for all kinds of Croup—fully believing that its remedial powers are comprehensive enough to embrace every form of disease, from the slightest cold to the most dangerous symptoms of pulmonary complaint.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY.

From Rev. FRANCIS LORRELL, Pastor of the South Congregational Church, Bridgeport, Ct.
"I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering humanity to bear testimony to the virtues of Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. I have used it—when I have had occasion for any remedy for Coughs, Colds or Sore Throat—for many years, and never in a single instance has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very lame on Saturday, and have found the delivery of two sermons on the following day with all its labors, but by a liberal use of the Balsam my lameness has invariably been removed, and I have preached without difficulty."

I commend it to my brethren in the ministry, and to public speakers generally, as a certain remedy for the bronchial troubles to which we are peculiarly exposed."

Prepared by SEYMOUR W. WISTAR, 18 Tremont street, Boston, and sold by Druggists generally.

Poetry.

THE SEASON OF LOVE.

The spring time of love

Is both happy and gay,

For joy sprinkles blossoms

And balm in our way;

The sky, earth and ocean,

In beauty repose,

And all the bright future

Is couched in rose.

The summer of love

Is the bloom of the heart,

When hill, grove and valley

Their music impart,

And the pure glow of heaven

Is seen in fond eyes—

As lakes show the rainbow

That's hung in the skies.

The autumn of love

Is the season to cheer,

Life's mild Indian summer,

The smile of the year;

Which comes when the golden

Ripe harvest is stored,

And yields its own blessings,

Repose and reward.

The winter of love

Is the beam that we win,

While the storm howls without,

From the sunshine within.

Love's reign is eternal,

The heart is his throne,

And he has all seasons

Of life for his own.

legal brethren.

litigation, S— was his man; for if anybody could gain it for him he could. He not only understood all the quirks and

turns in the law, but was fertile in original expedients. The goodness or badness of a case was nothing to him; his business was to gain it for his client, by any means he could use, fair or foul.

At length, from some cause or other not clearly ascertained, S— became religiously disposed, and joined the church.

An influential man like him was not long suffered to remain inactive in the secu-larities of the church. At the first opportunity he was made a vestryman.

S— had always been looked upon

in the community as a pretty hard case,

and the reputation by no means belied

the truth. The gaining of one like him

over to the cause of religion, was therefore a source of no little congratulation

to those who regarded things spiritual,

and was looked upon as quite a triumph

over the enemy of souls. There were some, however, who shrugged their shoulders, and professed to have just about as much confidence in him now as they ever had, and to regard his religion, to use one of their expressions, as "all in my eye."

Matters professionally went on pretty much in the old way. Religion, in the eyes of S—, was too sacred a thing to bring down into the world, where it must suffer violence, and he, in consequence,

brought into disrepute. He, therefore, kept his religion nicely laid up in lavender, for Sunday, when it was brought forth un-

spotted from the world.

About two years after S— joined the church, it was thought by those who had affairs in charge, that they ought to have a new and more imposing edifice

than the one they worshipped in. S—

was prominent in the matter—in fact he was the prime mover, and headed a subscription list with a thousand dollars.

In due time the church was finished,

and an elegant edifice it was. But the building committee and the architect had managed to run the cost up to a hundred thousand dollars, and the church in debt

about seventy thousand.

This caused

all concerned to feel, as might be supposed, rather serious on the subject. A debt of seventy thousand dollars was a serious affair placed in any light.

The first thing to be done was to have a sale of the pews. This proceeded rather slowly, and the prices at which they were sold were by no means so large as had been anticipated. From this source only twenty thousand dollars could be raised.

In this aspect of affairs, S—, who was chairman of the building committee, and to whom was mainly charge-

able the excess of cost over the first estimate made for the church, felt called upon

to devise means of liquidating the heavy debt.

"It could be done easy enough, if those who are able would come forward and buy

pews at fair prices instead of renting

them," he said to a fellow vestryman.

It was freely admitted that this would certainly change the aspect of affairs—

But, if members preferred renting to buying, nothing could be done.

"They ought to be made to buy," said

S—, warmly. "There is Preston,

worth thirty of forty thousand dollars at least, who, instead of paying a couple of

thousand dollars for the pew his family

occupies, is very well content to get it at a yearly rate of a hundred dollars. It is too bad! I would not give much for his showing in religion, if he has no better way

of showing it."

"He certainly ought to buy," was unhesitatingly replied.

"He shall buy!" said S—, snapping his fingers, as a sudden thought struck him.

"Do you think you can make him?"

"Yes."

"How? What means will you use?"

"Never mind about that. But mark

my words for it, next Sunday Preston will be the owner, instead of the mere tenant of his pew."

The lawyer went to his office, and writing a note, despatched it by his office

messenger. In twenty minutes a well dressed man entered, and bowed to the lawyer with a deferential air.

"Take a chair Jones—I want to talk with you," said S—. "You know we've managed to get confoundly in debt with our new church."

"Yes; so it seems," was the assenting

reply.

"And some how or other we must manage to get out of debt, and we can

if the thing is done rightly. I believe I have hit upon the mode."

"Ah! Well, you are fortunate. Nobody else could have done it."

"So I flatter myself. There are too many pews rented. If all who are able to buy would purchase instead of renting,

the debt would be paid off in a week."

"No doubt of that."

"Very well. That is admitted. Now

my plan is to make them buy."

"If you can."

"And I can, with a good fellow like

you to aid me. And I think your affection for the church is strong enough to induce you to lend a willing hand to the work. Debt is a terrible thing."

"Indeed it is! But how can I aid?"

"Are you willing?"

"Oh, certainly."

"Very well. Then without any body's knowing what we are about, or suspect-

ing any concern between us, we can make

some forty or fifty pew renters become purchasers, and thus pay the whole debt."

"How?" How? I am anxious to know that."

"Very well, I will inform you. There is Preston to begin with. His pew is a very eligible one, and if he gives it up,

he can't possibly get another without going far down the aisle; for every good

pew in the church is either rented or sold. Now his pew is worth at least two thousand dollars."

"Yes, and he ought to pay that for it.

He is able enough."

"So I think. Very well. Now I will place two thousand dollars in your hands,

and do you go to the treasurer who has charge of the matter, and offer to buy the pew, saying that you are ready to pay the price down for it, cash. He will, of course tell you that he must see Preston

first, and give him the option of buying

it. And Preston, rather than let you have the pew, will buy. Dye see?"

"Capital. It's the very thing!"

"Isn't it?"

"If you ain't a lawyer, dyed in the wool, there's no mistake," said the man,

leaning back in his chair, and giving vent

to a hearty burst of laughter.

On the next Sabbath, Preston sat in his own pew, sure enough; and the treas-

course of a fortnight I understand, the little soldiers' orphans, that were with us the past week, are to return to take part in a dramatic and musical entertainment, which I hear is in preparation, the funds of which are to be placed in Colonel Young's hands to aid him in educating these and other orphan children that were made so by the war wherever they may be found. The Colonel we hear is trying hard to establish a permanent home for soldiers' children.

Men of Quincy, put your shoulder to the wheel also, and help all you can. Begin by patronizing the entertainment, and where you may find some amusement, and where by your presence you will help on the good cause for which the Colonel and his wife are laboring so hard. Do not forget, though, in the mean time, that there are those among us whom you promised to look out for; and that in our school rooms every day there are children that are not comfortably clothed for the coming winter, that is even now at our door, and that you said "They shall not want." It is for your interest also to do so, else your tax-bills will grow larger as our almshouses are filled by those who after long and weary struggling must at last fail if they are not helped by those who are stronger, and can and ought to do so.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1867.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

COLD WEATHER. A true, say we to Prophets. We were told last spring, that we were to have a hot summer, and again, a mild winter. But when the portals are lifted by Old Time, what a disappointment! The thermometer below zero, and in some localities in this vicinity, it is put down at sixteen. And now the ground is covered with snow, some two or three feet, (badly drifted,) which has interrupted the avenues of communication with our neighbors of the city, made locomotion about our streets tedious, and keeps our children away from school. Really, we hope the next revolution has something more pleasant in store for us, that we may not become wholly skeptical in the predictions of those who would reveal to us the hidden things of nature.

ANOTHER TIN WEDDING. About thirty of our friends in North Quincy, met at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Eliab Ram-dell, one evening last week, to congratulate them on the tenth anniversary of their marriage. Although the evening was dark and misty, it seemed to have no effect on the spirits of the company, and everything passed off "merry as a marriage bell."

There was a goodly supply of tin ware, all of the most recent description. In the course of the evening the company sat down to a bountiful supper of chowder with all the "fixins." About eleven o'clock the party separated, the younger married portion firmly resolving to have their "tin wedding" come around as soon as possible.

THE REV. H. D. CATLIN, pastor of the Unitarian Society, of Neponset, will occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church, next Sunday afternoon.

LOOK! READ! EXAMINE! A new thing! It beats the Sun! We sincerely think that the new patent Star Burner, offered for sale by Messrs. C. F. & J. W. Pierce, is superior in several points to the celebrated Sun Burner. Reader, call and examine for yourself and we think you will come to the same conclusion.

THE MOVEMENT for the annexation of portions of Dorchester to Boston appears to be gaining ground. The Traveler says that the probable boundary line of Boston on the west and south will finally run from Charles river at or near Watertown bridge, all the way round to Neponset river, bringing Brookline, Brighton and parts of West Roxbury and Dorchester, within the municipal limits.

CLOTHING. Gentlemen, now is your time to buy cheap. Read the advertisement of George H. Richards, 23, 24 and 25 Dock Square, Boston, and when you visit the city be sure and give him a call.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.—Author of our popular Juveniles, which has run the cycle of three successful years, and enters the fourth on January next. This Magazine has always held a high rank in juvenile literature, and received a support from "Our Young Folks" that must be highly flattering to the publishers. In the future, new features, of an interesting character, are to be introduced—a new story, (a Holiday romance) from the pen of Charles Dickens, the celebrated novelist, will appear in an early issue, and other improvements made, that must still further enhance its value to its juvenile patrons.

The publishers have been very liberal towards their subscribers, forwarding to each, with the December number, a good sized oil painting (a premium donation), on an interesting subject, suitable to be framed and hung up in the parlor.

Published at two dollars a year, by Ticknor & Fields, Boston.

A NOVELTY IN ART. is described in another column, which is another step in cheapening the luxuries of life in the department of pictures. Dodge, Collier & Perkins, 113 Washington street, Boston, have the materials, and even a child can learn in a few moments to reproduce beautiful flowers, animals, faces and landscapes, at a trifling expense.

A forty-five year courtship is still progressing at East Lynn.

THE SICKLY SOUTH. In New Orleans on the 5th inst., roses and lilies were all in bloom.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, DEC. 12, 1867.

Election of a Democratic Mayor—Doctor Shurtleff—Trade and Finance—Public Lectures all the go—Charles F. Train vs. our Hub—General Grant as next President.

The city election is among the notable events of the week. Dr. Samuel B. Shurtleff, was the successful candidate for Mayor, beating Mr. Norcross by 480 votes majority. The Doctor is a native of this city, born in 1810, a graduate of Harvard University in 1831, and according to the Triennial Catalogue of that ancient seat of learning, has been the recipient of divers literary honors. He is a prominent physician of this city, and reputed wealthy. He makes the nineteenth Mayor of Boston he chosen. The Doctor is a Democrat, which is an unpardonable sin with many here. The general belief is that he will make a good Mayor for all that. The Board of Aldermen for next year, will consist of seven Republicans who are experienced in the duties of their office; all being present members of the Board, and five Democrats, most of whom have served in the City government. The Common Council will consist of thirty-eight Republicans and twenty-two Democrats, and most of the body have had much experience in civic legislation.

We have to chronicle weekly the continuance of "dull times." Cannot help it. The statement from Washington of the public debt, showing an increase of ten millions, produces a quid nunc? among the people, and should lead to the curtailment of extravagance in public affairs. The chief talk with business men is the vote in Congress against contraction. Probably none will be made during the winter. Gold according to the broker's phrase, is "flat," now 136 5/8 with a sliding scale downwards.

We are at the meridian of the lecture season, and Music Hall is scarcely a night unoccupied. On Tuesday, Wendell Phillips delivered the last lecture in the Fraternity course—subject, "Daniel O'Connell." Last evening, Henry Ward Beecher—subject "Brains and Hands." On Tuesday, Dec. 17th, Jas. E. Murdock, Thursday, December 12, (this evening,) the Old Bay State course will be favored by an address from the Rev. E. Chapin—subject, (entirely new) "Building and Being." Charles Dickens returns to Boston, and will read at the Tremont Temple, on Monday and Tuesday, December 23d and 24th inst. That unique, nondescript man, Charles Francis Train, lectures here on Saturday evening in favor of "Female Suffrage," digressing so far in his address, as to say anything but complimentary of this Hub, and advising all young men to clear out of Boston and go to his Ellysian at the West.

Looking to the great Presidential contest of next year, the Grant party at the present day is evidently in the ascendency. While we admit that reforms are demanded in our whole financial system, and a reduction of the national expenditures and taxation, to carry this out a great party is springing up for General Grant, independent of all parties, cliques and factions, who believe that he favors reconstruction on a fair and liberal basis, and that the reduction of the National debts by two hundred and fifty millions, the first year would be the immediate fruits of his election to the Presidency. How far he favors a modification of the Congressional plan of reconstruction is not known. If he can suggest a better system, let us have it. It is now supposed that General Grant will place himself on the principle of the Constitutional Amendment, Article XIV, at one time passed by Congress. This secured the civil rights of all men, by forbidding every kind of class legislation, and demanding equal protection for all rights of persons and property. It disfranchised but few, leaving the question of suffrage to the States themselves, but provided that a State which discriminated against race or color, should be represented on the basis, not of its whole population, but of the actual voting population,—disowning the whole rebel debt. It is to be regretted that Congress had not made this proposed amendment a finality—so says the New York Evening Post.

FOR THE PATRIOT.

A NOVELTY IN ART.

Decalcomanie Goods are now announced as wonderful and beautiful treasures for the Holidays. But few know the meaning of the term given to these marvels of art. "Oil pictures," as the Germans call them, are pictures prepared in such a way that they can be at once transferred to paper, wood or metal, by means of moisture and varnish. The subject having been chosen from the box of pictures, a bunch of flowers, a face, a landscape or an animal, the surface is coated with copal varnish and laid on the card: envelope, paper-folder, vase, or whatever is to be ornamented, pressed and smoothed. The back of the picture is wet with the sponge at the same time, and in a moment the object is transformed. When dry it can be fixed with varnish. There are four sizes of boxes imported and five hundred patterns in sheets, of various subjects, rare and beautiful. Some of them form delicate ornaments for match safes, card cases, needle books, etc., and others are larger, and richly colored for framing. Not only are young eyes delighted but old ones are charmed with the rapid multiplication of paintings by this easy and inexpensive process. The discovery is one of the most useful recently made, and will be welcomed, especially in the family circle.

EXPENSIVE BED. In a straw bed of Richard Willard of Salem, (Vt.), was hid five hundred dollars in Government bonds, two strings of gold beads, a gold dollar and some silver money. The bed was emptied into the hog pen, and nothing was thought of the valuables until a child discovered a gold bead in the offal of the pen, when his loss flashed upon them. Rather expensive hog feed that!

OUT OF WORK. It appears that fifty thousand persons in New York, who live by the labor of their hands are out of employment. Of the 28,000 engaged in the jewelry business, 90 per cent. are out of employ. Half the journeymen carpenters are in the same condition. There are 400 hatters who find work but one day in six. Five thousand tailors are out of work, and wages have been reduced thirty-three and a third per cent. A thousand shipwrights have nothing to do, and the business of the iron-workers was never so dull. In Troy, N. Y., the Rensselaer Rolling Mills have stopped work for the season, throwing three hundred hands out of employment.

Mr. Weston forfeits $6000 of the $10,000 he won by his success in reaching Chicago within the time stated, because he failed to walk 100 miles in twenty-four hours. The distance walked is not quite 1235 miles, and was accomplished in twenty-six days, making almost forty-eight miles a day. After all the feat is not so very astounding, leaving aside the hundred miles a day walk, which was not accomplished.

France makes thirty-five million francs worth of watches and clocks annually.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The work on the Monument to be erected to the memory of Quincy's fallen heroes, is progressing towards completion, and it is expected to be ready for dedication in May.

Below we publish the names of the deceased soldiers in the order in which they will appear on each of the four tablets. Should any of our readers discover any omission or error in the above lists, they will confer a great favor by notifying either of the Building Committee at once, that they may be corrected before the plates are cast. The members of the Committee are William B. Duggan, I. W. Munroe, W. Abernethy, Washington M. French, and Daniel Baxter.

Summary Intelligence.

New York claims that buildings are going up at that city worth $50,000,000. Eighty-three silver bricks from a single mine in Colorado were recently on exhibition in Denver. They weighed together more than a ton.

It is reported that Gardiner and Hemming paid Dan Rice $35,000 for making faces at the audiences at their circus, the past season.

A rag boiler weighing 15,000 pounds, has lately been finished by Roche Bros., of Springfield, Mass.

A woman in Providence R. I. refused to marry her lover on the very day assigned for her wedding, because he had shaved off his moustache.

A clerk in a Broadway dry goods store has been arrested for the larceny of $70,000 worth of silks, laces, velvets, etc., which he carried off by degrees.

A damsel in Boston recently borrowed five hundred dollars, and gave herself as "collateral." The note has one year to run.

The mud holes on the Overland route are said to be filled up with tons of mail matter.

The New York Metropolitan Police cost $2,499,177 within the last 10 months.

There are 12,000 blind people in the United States.

An Indianapolis citizen pays $1.03 on personal property and $7 on dogs.

Boston house-keepers have discovered that flour mixed with lead water makes the best bread. It takes a little longer to rise, and is therefore unpopular with cooks, who consequently have to rise a little earlier to have their hot cakes ready for breakfast.

The revolver cannon, lately constructed at Liege, has been tried. It has eight chambers, two of which are discharged at each on the stoppage in the rotation. It will fire 100 shots a minute, and with carriage and ammunition weighs about 600 lbs.

The very latest fashion of the day in New York is for parties about to be married in church, to go into the church a day or two beforehand and rehearse the whole ceremony music and all.

Eighty-three marriage certificates were issued in Boston on the first three days of Thanksgiving week, and one clergyman in that city took $500 in marriage fees on Wednesday and Thursday of the same week.

Kentucky, already famous for its caves, has another in Fleming County, said to be equal or superior to the Mammoth cave.

France has ordered 60,000 sword bayonets from Sweden, to be delivered next spring.

The kid glove dealers in Boston are making a good thing out of the Dickens readings. An audience in the Tremont Temple wears $4000 worth, which for four evenings makes $16,000.

WINTER'S BALM OF Wild Cherry.

In the whole history of medical discoveries no remedy has performed so many such remarkable cures of the numerous affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, as this long-tried and justly celebrated Balm. So generally acknowledged is the superior excellence of this remedy that but few of the many who have tested its virtues by experience fail to keep it at hand as a speedy and certain cure for sudden attacks of Croup, Croup, whooping Cough, and all the affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, which are so common in the winter season. It is so simple and so easy to use, and so effective, that it is a household necessity in every family. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY.

From REV. FRANCIS LORRELL, Pastor of the South Congregational Church, Bridgeport, Ct.: "I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering humanity to bear testimony to the virtues of Dr. WINTER'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY. I have used it when I have had occasion for any remedy for Coughs, Croup, or Sore Throat. For many years, and never in a single instance has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very sore on Saturday, and looked forward to the delivery of two sermons on the following day with sad misgivings, but by a liberal use of the Balm my labors have been happily relieved, and I have preached without difficulty. I consider it my duty to bear testimony to the virtues of this Balm, and to recommend it to the public. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand."

For all the Pains of the Throat originating in SCROFULA.

There is nothing so equal to the purifying effects of Iodine when administered in a pure state.
Dr. H. ANDERSON'S Iodine Water is a pure solution of Iodine dissolved in water without a solvent, and is the best remedy for Scrofula, and kindred diseases over the world. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand. It is a remedy of the most valuable kind, and one which every family should have on hand.

A CARD.

The Subscriber wishes to return his many thanks to the public of Quincy and vicinity, for the liberal patronage bestowed upon him within the past four years, and would state that he is now better prepared than ever to furnish good music, where it is required, having secured the services of Mr. George Monk, who is a first class violinist, and whose talent is too widely known to need comment. All orders should be made to R. G. ELLIOTT, Quincy, Nov. 16. 1f

We judge from the immense sales of Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S IMPROVED (new style) HAIR RESTORER or DRESSING (in one bottle) is preferred by every one. Every Druggist sells it. Price One Dollar.

CARRIAGE AND ORNAMENTAL PAINTING. The Subscribers would again call the attention of their friends and the public to this branch of their business, which is now in successful operation at their new location on Codding Street. All orders in this line, left at the "OLD STAND," 65 Hancock Street, will receive especial favor, and promptly executed.

Poetry.

THE SOLDIER'S GRAVE.

Tread lightly—'tis a soldier's grave,
A lonely, mossy mound—
And yet, to hearts like mine and thine
It should be holy ground.

Speak softly—let no careless laugh,
No idle, thoughtless jest,
Escape your lips, where sweetly sleeps
The hero in his rest.

For him no reveille shall beat
When morning beams shall come;
For him at night, no tattoo rolls
Its thunder from the drum.

No costly marble marks the place,
But rudely on that bending tree
Is carved the soldier's name.

A name—not dear to us—but ah!
There may be lips that breathe
The name as sacredly and low
As vesper prayers at eve.

There may be brows that wear for him
The morning cypress vine;
And hearts that make this lonely grave
A lonely pilgrim shrine.

There may be eyes that joined to gaze
With love into his own,
Now keeping midnight vigils long
With silent grief alone.

There may be hands now clasped in prayer
This soldier's hand has pressed;
And cheeks washed pale by sorrow's tears
His own cold cheek caressed.

Tread lightly, for a man bequeathed,
Ere laid beneath this sod,
His ashes to his native land,
His gallant soul to God!

Then set them on the fire with a quart

ORATION

BY HENRY LUNT, ESQ.

At the High School Re-Union, Town Hall,
Quincy, Wednesday Eve. Dec. 4, 1867.

MR. PRESIDENT AND SCHOOLMATES:
In coming together on an occasion like
the present, some of the most delightful periods of our lives are recalled to our minds, and scenes in which there is little or nothing to mar the brightness of the picture are brought vividly before
our imaginations,—scenes that will grow brighter and more beautiful as each advancing year shall re-open them to our vision.

This is a sort of romance contemplated with the remembrance of our school life,—a sort of indescribable enchantment
about it, which creates a peculiar bond of sympathy and fellow-feeling between old schoolmates, closer and more lasting than any induced by Free Masonry or similar associations formed in after life. What a personal pride we take in the success
and advancement in life of a schoolmate!

How we rejoice with him in the honors he may win, or the wealth he may acquire;
how we sympathize and mourn with him
when misfortune or sorrow overtake him; and what a feeling of shame and degradation we suffer, when by any low,
mean or unworthy act, he stains his fair
name, and forfeits his claim to the respect of his fellow-men!

It is well for us, then, that our Association should have been formed, and should hold its first meeting as an organized body under such favorable auspices,
and with such flattering prospects of success. Our yearly gatherings will keep alive our friendship and intimacy
with one another, and will bring together
in a pleasant and social manner many of us who perhaps may never meet at any other times. They will be looked forward to by some, and I trust by all of us, as among the most enjoyable occasions of each year. And while we mingle in the gayeties and enjoyments of the hour, let us pay "the passing tribute of a sigh" to those loved ones of our band
who have gone before us to that other better land, "from whose bourn no traveller returns." We are not all here, alas!
We miss many a dear face which the remorseless hand of death has removed from our sight, although it can never remove the memory of their short lives.
While we cannot but regret their early deaths, cut off as they were in the spring-
time of life, its thorny path yet untrod,
and seeming full of flowers and joy and hope,—who of us shall venture to repine
at their lot, or to say that their death was untimely? The loss is ours, not theirs.
And it is not wholly a loss to us, even—
The contemplation of their virtues, of the purity and loveliness of their short lives,
must serve as a help and an incentive to us to act and live in such a manner, that when our summons comes to leave these earthly scenes, we may be worthy of their companionship in that eternal company
of angels that circles round the throne of the Most High.

The QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL has now been in existence for a little more than fifteen years. Founded amidst discouragement, distrust and violent opposition from many quarters, it has outlived its early trials, has borne down many of the prejudices against it, if not entirely dispelled them, and has more than vindicated the faith and hopes of its first advocates and friends. It has been and always must be a source of incalculable benefit to the town; and like the sturdy oak, whose growth is the more hardy and vigorous,
the more severely it is assailed by storm,
blasts and pitiless storms, our School will only be aided in its progress, and increased
in its usefulness, by any short-sighted opposition which may be offered by those who cannot appreciate its purposes. Since its foundation, it has carefully trained and sent forth from its portals nearly a thousand of us, its children, some to pursue
our search for knowledge in yet higher and wider fields of learning,—but most of us to enter at once upon the grand battle
of life, and fight our way with the rest of mankind for such rewards as our merit
or our good fortune may bring us.

We are a privileged body, inasmuch as
we form the most highly educated class,
and of necessity shall become, as time
goes on, in all respects the most influential class of the community in which we live. With our privileges come corresponding duties and responsibilities; and I propose, in what I have to say this evening, to consider and touch upon some of these, our duties.

Of course it would be in vain to attempt to exhaust the subject or even to enumerate all of our manifold responsibilities, within the limits of an occasion
like this, or within the compass of such an address. All I can hope, or shall endeavor to do, will be to discuss with you,
as briefly as I may, some of the more prominent and important of our duties, leaving your own minds to follow out the theme, to such extent as you may find pleasing or profitable.

Of our responsibilities to God and the Divine mission of Christianity as exemplified in our own lives and in the civilization of our race, I need hardly speak to men and women reared as we have been in the bosoms of New England families,
amid the surroundings and in the atmosphere of New England homes, replete with the faith, and abounding in the traditions of our grand old Puritan ancestors.

I need hardly remind you, either, of the duty we owe to the cause of Good Morals and Good Order in the community in which we live. We are eminently a law-abiding people—a people with deeply implanted moral sentiments and high aims.
These, also, are indigenous to our New England soil. But there is a lurking Mephistopheles in every community who is decidedly opposed to our old fashioned
New England notions, who appears in every attractive form of vice, and is persistent in his efforts to entrap the unwary.
Upon us rests the burden of thrusting
him aside, and of setting in our own conduct examples fit for imitation by others.
Let us prove ourselves worthy of the trust. Let us "set well our part," remembering that "there all the honor lies."
We can do no more; we ought to do no less.

We owe a special duty to the great cause of Education. I need enter into no argument,—I need make no plea to you in behalf of Education. We all recognize its importance; we all feel its necessity.
It is the rock upon which our republican edifice is founded. It is the keystone of that grand arch of Liberty and Equal Rights which spans the Continent from sea to sea; beneath which at last the free air
is purified from the foul miasma of human slavery. Freedom and Education! They are walking the Earth hand in hand. They are united by the laws of Heaven in an eternal alliance. Wherever Education scatters the darkness of ignorance, there Freedom is sure to follow, and chains fall
from the limbs of oppressed humanity.
And no instrument has ever been devised
and employed by mankind more effective for the elevation of society than the system of free schools which our fathers bequeathed to us. It is a truly republican institution. When the fathers of New England conceived the idea of establishing such schools for their children, that moment the freedom of this Western World was made certain; a virtual assurance was given to the world
that here, popular forms of government would alone flourish. If we look back then, and seek for the chief causes and instruments of our political and civil blessings, we find the School to be among the foremost. And when with anxious, yet hopeful spirits, we look forward, from what quarter, I would ask, do we gather cheering omens, and whence proceeds our confidence in the permanence of our freedom? I answer, that next to the altars of our holy faith, the schools, where the children of the land are to be educated,
rise to give confidence to the hopes we entertain for our country.

With us, intellectual and moral education has been carried to a great extent.
We have had our free schools, invented
and handed down to us by our ancestors,
and they have done a blessed work for us. We have had our colleges, universities, and the system of popular lectures;
our free press, too—sending out millions of newspapers, pamphlets, books, for the instruction of the public mind and heart.
The whole apparatus of Education has been here set in motion on a great scale,
and with magnificent results. The means and instruments put in operation have done all they could be expected to do;
they have made our people as intelligent,
as sharply observing, as thrifty, as moral,
as virtuous, as any people on the face of the Earth. We are the great northern hive from which a redundant population
swarms to other sections of our wide and fertile country. We colonize the vast deserts of the West and the battle-washed fields of the South, with our enterprising emigrants. No wind but fills our sails.
No sea but wets our keels. No harvest of wealth but is reaped by our labor. No sown seed but is sown for and plucked
by our daring and skillful adventurers.
We have just fought and subdued a gigantic and cursed rebellion in the interest of the three cursed demon of Slavery,
solely by the power of a fixed and unalterable determination in behalf of the right induced by our high intellectual, moral and religious education. In our own immediate community, however, as well as elsewhere, there seems to be a lack of individual interest in the cause of education and in the conduct of our schools.
There seems to be a sort of feeling that education and the schools will take care of themselves. Our voters appropriate so much money every year, and our taxpayers pay their taxes for the support of the schools, and seem to think their duty is done! Our mothers of families see that their children are properly clothed,
and send them to school, with their lunch-
boxes prepared, and seem to think their duty is done! They seldom think of visiting the schools to which their children
belong, of watching their children's progress in their studies, of observing what they are taught; and still more seldom do they reflect whether it may not be an assistance rather than a hindrance to the teacher who has charge of their children,
to visit his school frequently, to observe
what he teaches, and how he does it, to praise what they like and frankly criticize what they dislike. They seldom reflect, either, upon the aid and encouragement which such a course would furnish to the pupils themselves, and what an incentive it would be to them to further and more hearty exertions in their studies. I believe that some such personal, individual interest, actively manifested, is needful in order to attain the highest degree of usefulness and efficiency
in our public schools.

There is another duty which we must always keep in view,—and that is the duty we owe to our Country. Born in this ancient town,—the birthplace of that noble hand who pledged "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor," that their infant country should be trained in the principles of freedom,—and of that other patriot, that "old man eloquent," the grandfather of those unspotted character and transcendent abilities we contemplate with pride and admiration,—where the very air we breathe is instinct with the life
and hope of liberty,—we should be false indeed, false to our training, false to our traditions, false to ourselves, were we
other than loyal and patriotic citizens.

During the recent terrible struggle that so imperilled our Country's very existence as a Nation, but from which she rose at last in such majesty and triumph,
we were called upon to do our share
in the glorious work, and we promptly answered the call. We can point with pride, though it may be with trembling lips and moistened eyes, to the graves of our brothers slain in the cause of right,
and say—these are the sacrifices we offer on the altar of our country; these are our pledges that we shall ever be true to our duty and to her.

As we look around upon our Fraternity to-night, how vividly our minds recall every scene of our martyrs' brothers' presence
with us, and the rapidly successive events
of their warlike life! The patriotic ardor,
the struggle between sense of duty and pain of exile from home and friends, the purpose ripening into determination, the parting words so full of devotion and hope; then the sudden and heroic death
amid the shock of battle, the lingering, but no less heroic death by the wasting hand
of disease, the sad and solemn processions
when we laid them to their final rest,
—mourning their virtues and their young lives seemingly wasted. But, thank God!
there was no fruitless martyrdom. They did not die in vain. A redeemed and regiment of country boys, and will ever bless them for their devotion and their truth.

And let me not forget, in this connection, the noble work performed by you, our sisters, during the war. Not only did you aid your brothers a brave
"God speed" on their errand of danger and death, but with nimble fingers and loving hearts you put together thousands of comfortable garments and delicacies of food to relieve the necessities, and cheer
the spirits of the gallant boys in the distant camp and the dreary hospital. You proved yourselves "ministering angels" indeed, as many a grateful heart can attest.

But not only in seasons of danger and
war has our Country claims upon us.
We owe her a duty of equal importance
in times of peace and domestic tranquility. There is manifested a growing spirit of indifference to matters of political importance. Every one admits in the abstract the power and importance of the ballot; but in what way is our theoretical admiration for it manifested? A few moments grudgingly spent at the polls on election days; a vote or two carelessly thrown for candidates of almost unknown
character or principles,—and with this it is supposed that the duties of a citizen have been discharged! Unwilling to attend primary political meetings, men complain that unworthy candidates are brought forward. Negligent in preparing the means by which the proper use and full blessings of the ballot can be insured, they allow it to fall into the control of vulgar and unscrupulous hands.
Many of us occasionally to some unpleasant ends, the ballot gradually loses
its hold upon the regard of the people,— nay, by many its obligations are practically ignored.

In the play of "London Assurance,"
the old coxcomb, Sir Harecourt Courtly, professes a contempt for marriages because they are becoming so common, and esteems it a matter of the most delicate dignity to run away with his daughter's wife. So among the coxcombs of the present day, of which society is so full, there seems to be an indifference to preserving the forms of political purity,
and a willingness to destroy the only bond which preserves the safety of the relation between the individual and the State.

But this contempt is manifested not only toward the use and power of the ballot, but extends also to the official position to which the ballot elevates the individual, so that to be a candidate for any public office is in some quarters now considered almost disreputable, and the chief requisite of admission to some circles of select society is a tongue which rails at the ignorance of our Legislatures
and the depravity of our Congresses.

Now what is the cause of this feeling,
so widely at variance with the spirit of our institutions, and so destructive to the fulfillment of their purposes? Looking at it as we may, considering all the confusion to which the

CHRISTMAS.

Again the winter's solstice returns and marks the incoming Holidays. December is a grim, gloomy month, and gives us short days and sickly sunshine, with bleak winds and driving snows. But indoor scenes are all the more inviting from the contrast they present. For twelve centuries, at least, the Christmas holidays have been kept with every kind of rejoicing. In the Middle Ages, fathers and children, bishop and priest, joined in the joyous carols that attended the nocturnal masses—enlivening their meetings and greetings with the notes of stringed instruments and chiming bells. In Germany and in England, feasts and grotesque exhibitions have long delighted old and young; trees loaded with gifts, candles gleamed brightly, and the big yule log or Christmas block brought to the ingle, to last till Candlemas, to temper the severity of the cold. The holly, the ivy, hurel and mistletoe, have long adorned houses and churches, and the season is improved in giving gifts among friends.

Every year seems to make more popular amongst us the celebration of its advent who brought "Peace, good will toward men." It is a favorable time for domestic enjoyment and the pleasures of friendship, as well as for the public acknowledgment of God in the gift of a Saviour. We heartily join in the salutations of the season, and wish A MERRY CHRISTMAS to all our readers far and near. In their social festivities, those happy meetings, which brighten the golden chain of domestic love and neighborly acquaintance; in the giving and reception of the pledges of love, and in all the joyous festivities of the season, they will please receive our best wishes and heartiest congratulations.

THE GLASS BLOWERS. Our citizens have been very pleasantly entertained at the Town Hall, many evenings recently, by the Bohemian Glass Blowers. The assembly, each evening, were made the recipients of many beautiful glass presents. G. Harvey Field received a pretty Bohemian pipe, as the best gentleman dancer; Miss Lucy Jones, a pair of birds, as the best lady dancer. Messrs. Galen Bowditch, Jr. and C.W. Perry, each received a gift—one for being the homeliest and the other the handsomest man present. On Wednesday evening a very pretty collection of glass work enclosed in a neat glass box, and valued at one hundred dollars, was drawn by E. F. Taylor, son of Edmund B. Taylor, Esq.

REAL ESTATE SALE. We learn that the valuable estate on Hancock street, known as the "Saville Homestead," has been sold by Mr. Edwin H. Saville, to Mr. C. C. Johnson of this town, for $6000.

ANTI-ANNEXATION MEETING. A meeting of the citizens of Dorchester opposed to the annexation of Dorchester to Boston was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of considering means of defeating the measure.

The assembly was called to order by Mr. James H. Upham. Mr. C. J. Bigham was chosen President of the meeting, and Messrs. A. C. Southworth and W. V. Munroe, Secretaries.

The meeting was addressed by Messrs. S. S. Drew, B. W. Harris, G. T. S. Townsend, Edmund J. Baker, Henry A. Scudder, and others. A committee of twenty-five was appointed to take charge of the entire subject of the prevention of annexation, with full powers to fill vacancies and to increase their number if necessary.

A HORRIBLE DEATH. Mr. William Pope, of Hull, on the 24th ult., entered his boat and proceeded to a well known spot in the bay, where his efforts as a fisherman had frequently before been rewarded. During his stay there he was overtaken by a dense fog which shut out from his sight the shore and all other objects not very near to him. He took his oars and started, as he supposed, in a direct course for home; but he made a miscalculation, and ere long his boat became stuck in a mud bank, from which his strength, was inadequate to relieve her.

Being in shallow water, and rightly supposing he was not far from shore, he, as a last resort got out of his boat and attempted to wade to dry land. But the mud which had fastened so rigidly to his skiff now took earnestly hold of his limbs, and he soon found that he was a prisoner and powerless to move. He shouted for assistance and his cries were heard, but as the fog was dense and impenetrable, he could not be seen, and no aid came to him. And there the poor man stood for many long hours, his heart undoubtedly filled with agonizing despair, surrounded on every side by the chilling water gradually crept upward, growing deeper and deeper, until it submerged and drowned him.

His body was found next day standing erect where he had met his fate, rigid in death, with his garments icy and stiff enclosing him. Mr. Pope was 56 years of age, and left a wife and family who depended on him for support.

SNOW FLOW. Among the lists of patents issued from the Patent Office last week, we notice one to our townsman, Mr. Abel Nutting, for improved snow plow.

SALES OF CUBA AND PORTO RICO. A rumor, said to be authentic, has been received at Havana, that the Spanish Government had made a formal offer to the American Minister at Madrid to sell Cuba and Porto Rico to the American Government for one hundred and fifty million dollars in gold.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, DEC. 19, 1867.

Theopathy of business.—Severe winter—Congress moving on financial matters—Congressional Reconstruction.

The present December has been one of the coldest of the first winter months, for a generation past. Business in many branches is at a standstill. No small portion of the industrial community here is without employment. Boston is dull enough for mechanics, but in New York and other cities south of us, accounts are most disparaging for the interest of the laboring classes. We have a long winter before us, with gloomy prospects for those who depend upon their daily labors to live. To outward appearances the city is very lively, and the animation is increased by the good sleighing here and in the vicinity. The places of public amusement continue well patronized. Balls and social parties in fashionable life are frequent events. With all these seemingly gay appearances, there is an incubus of doubt and anxiety pressing on the spirit of the community. The topic of money is the business continues at a low ebb. Rents high. Living in any decent shape high. Employment scarce. These are no idle gossips. The sources of many of these evils are attributed to the unsettled condition of our national finances. Congress has these matters under profound consideration. The funding of our public debt, a change in national taxation, repeating the law for income, and a gradual return to specie payments, together with retrenchment in national expenditures, are subjects now before Congress. Mr. Hooper, of Massachusetts, reported a bill on Tuesday from the Committee on Ways and Means. "That all United States notes and National Bank notes shall be subject to taxation by or under the State authorities, in the same manner as all other moneys taxed, and at not higher rate." The Senate Finance Committee have authorized their Chairman to report a bill for funding the National debt. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds bearing six per cent. interest, and that the proceeds of said bonds shall be used in taking up the existing securities of the United States. These bonds to be exempt from taxation. Provision for the reduction of the public debt is made. The 5-20 bonds to be called in. Our securities abroad to be redeemed by issuing coupons or registered bonds at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent. interest. The said bonds to be payable in 40 years. The House currency contraction bill has reached the Senate and will undoubtedly soon become a law of the land. Fortunately for the country these grave financial matters are not confined to party lines.

On that great political problem of reconstruction, the Boston Traveller of Tuesday, this comments:—"Congress manifests no disposition to abandon or modify its reconstruction policy. The House yesterday by a vote of 111 to 32, declared that it would never consent to a retrograde movement and that the success of the reconstruction acts thus far shows there is no good reason for their repeal. This action will meet with the approval of all Republicans and of many others who are desirous that the present plan of reconstruction shall have a fair trial, so far it has fully met the expectation of its friends." It is evident from the tone of the whole Republican Press that this is to be one of the issues of the Presidential Election.

LETTER FROM CONCORD.

DECEMBER 8, 1867.

With the mercury five below and a smart breeze blowing, out-door exercise this morning must needs be somewhat vigorous to preserve warmth. The last time I visited this old historic town the mercury was among the nineties. Thus one extreme follows another. The population of Concord is about 2,500, and the pursuits of its people mainly agricultural. Emerson, Hawthorne, Thoreau and other literati have, however, given to it of late years, something of celebrity by their presence. The latter was a great solitaire. I have seen the pond where he spent most of a year in his favorite pursuits as a naturalist. Somebody has said, "the native freshness of his books remind you of a cedar swamp or an Indian camp, whose owner of home-land refreshes the nostrils." His "Cape Cod" has awakened a desire to read more of his charming works.

Captain Buttrick I met to-day, descending of a Revolutionary soldier, and a brave soldier himself, having seen probably more hard service than any of his townsmen now living. Some of his comrades are sleeping here, more on the battle field. The Monument not long ago erected, commemorates the deeds of all who found a birth-place, home or grave in Concord, and is an ornament and credit to the town. It is placed where such memorial shafts ought to stand, in the centre of the village, "seen and read of all men," a silent educator to all who walk by it day by day, both citizen and stranger.

Addison Gage, Esq., of the Middlesex Agricultural Society, has been prominent in securing admirable facilities for their annual Exhibitions, and when the new Hall is up, costing ten or fifteen thousand dollars, the Society will be fully equipped, and a still more efficient promoter of agricultural science.

Danahale is a lively village built up largely by the enterprise of the family whose name it bears. Mr. Damon has here extensive flannel manufactures. He looks out for the moral and religious culture of his employees. A Sabbath School and preaching services are open to all who wish to avail themselves of them.

C. N. S. Williams, Esq., a New York lawyer, is soon to be installed over the Congregational Church, of this town, with a salary of $1600, just double the amount before given. People are beginning to realize that good preaching is worth something, and should be paid for according to its worth. The High School begins its winter term to-day. Miss Mary Wheeler is the new female teacher,—a young lady of high culture and refinement, and who knows how to keep school. Mr. Neal is the Principal. Other items noted must be omitted for want of time and space.

THE SOLDIERS' ORPHANS.

QUINCY, DEC. 18th, 1867.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.
Again the merry season of Christmas and its holidays, is upon us; the season above all others to fill us with love and thanksgiving; and children are particularly joyous in anticipation of the great events of "Christmas Trees," and of hanging their stockings in the chimney corner, that good Santa Claus may fill them with toys and sweetmeats. But while a majority are thus made happy, many will be very sad, for there are thousands of little ones who have no fathers or mothers, and no kind friends to give them these little comforts they so much desire. O that I could supply every poor child on Christmas eve or night, with presents. What pleasure it would be to watch the beaming of delight on their little faces, when they awoke to realize that on this year at least they were not forgotten.

I am with others interested in several "Christmas Trees," but I look forward with more pleasure to the one that is being prepared for the little "SOLDIER BOYS," whose fathers died in defence of our flag, during the late war, and who are to be with us during the Christmas festival. The little fellows have been gathered together, and with others form a class of one hundred and thirty-five; they are under the guardianship of Colonel and Mrs. Young, and are receiving a military and general education. I have examined into the case, and can state to the highest authority that it is a cause worthy the support of every man, woman and child in the land. And I know that their coming amongst us has awakened a lively interest in people, and many friends of the soldiers are looking about us to see if there are not in our own town, children whose fathers gave up their lives on the altar of our country, who need our sympathy and our aid.

Therefore, while these little ones are earning for themselves a living, they are also doing an immense amount of good to other children, who, like themselves, have no parents to take care of them. I hope the good people of Quincy will fill the Town Hall on Christmas afternoon and evening, so that all the boys may carry away with them the impression they now have, that Quincy is above all other places the best they have visited. And those persons who cannot attend the performances, can help by sending refreshments to the Hall on Wednesday forenoon, and be assured that all they can do will be highly appreciated, and kindly remembered. Yours, &c.,

Francis Tukey, City Marshal of Boston for several years, but for the last ten years a resident of California, died on his ranch, near Sacramento, on the 23d ult., aged 52 years.

Summary Intelligence.

Jays city, Kansas, has not a house within the limits that is four months old, but it has 4000 inhabitants and a newspaper.

A dispatch was sent the other day from New York to London, and an answer received in five and a half hours.

Paris sends three hundred thousand children to school.

The good folks of Lee county, Va. were terribly exercised by the appearance one morning last week, of what they thought were three suns rising at once. The phenomenon, however, was merely the result of the solar refraction upon the clouds, though some of the unenlightened country folks believed the millennium was at hand.

Charlestown, (S. C.) papers speak in glowing terms of the enormous supply of fertilizing material discovered in South Carolina. As to quality, it "contains from 60 to 75 per cent. of pure phosphates," and is "more valuable than the Peruvian guano, which brings $80 per ton. As to quantity, the deposits "extend for miles" along the Ashley River, "cover many square miles," and may "produce $10,000,000."

A cheese is on exhibition in New York which weighs 7000 pounds, and contains the substance of 36 tons of milk, equal to one milking of 7000 cows. Its dimensions are: Diameter 6 feet 10 inches; thickness 3 feet, and circumference 21 feet.

The new postal cars on the Boston and Albany Railroad made their first trip on Monday. These cars are elegantly fitted up, and the arrangements for sorting the mails are most complete in all their appointments.

SOUVENIR OF TRAVEL. Among the many beautiful works of art published by John P. Soule, 129 Washington street, last is perhaps the most elaborate,—"The Hudson River from West Point;" an admirable chromo after Bricher, and one that elicits universal praise. It is 18 by 11 inches and is a pleasant souvenir for Christmas.

AN ENIGMATIC DIVINE, says, "I have been using the PERUVIAN STRIP. It gives me new vigor, buoyancy of spirits, elasticity of muscle." J. P. Dinsmore, 36 Day street, New York, will send free, a pamphlet of 32 pages, containing a full account of this remarkable medicine, to any one sending him their address.

The Great American Hair Preparation, valued at home and abroad, a real Hair Restorer or Dressing, (in one bottle.) A great triumph of science. Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S IMPROVED, (new style.) Every Druggist sells it. Price one dollar.

SELECT-READING.

The members of Mount Wollaston Lodge, together with a few invited friends, were agreeably entertained on Wednesday evening, at their Hall, by Mr. Lyander S. Richards, who in response to an invitation from the Lodge, gave an hour's select reading to these present. Mr. R. began with a very fine and pathetic piece entitled "The Snow." The first few stanzas showed that the gentleman understood what he was doing, and the close attention given by all was well repaid. He next gave, "More Hallelujah," by Hood, which was well read. Mr. R. followed with "The Bells," by Edgar A. Poe; and this he read with great success; the parts requiring an imitation of the different tones of the bell being given very finely. "Lullaby," a light, humorous piece, by Hood, next awakened the mirth of the audience, and this was followed by a long extract from "The Wife." This selection, though quite long, was not too long for the excellent rendering of it, and gave universal satisfaction. The reading was concluded by "Domestic Asides," by Hood, equally satisfactory as what preceded. Take it all together, it was a very pleasant and profitable hour's work, and we wish the audience that enjoyed it might have been larger. We hope the gentleman may be induced at some future time to give an evening-reading, so that more of his friends and those interested in such an entertainment may be present.

"SHARP PRACTICE." The late storm, so filled one of our new streets with snow that it became almost an impossibility to pass through it, but as only two houses were on that street, and only two persons had occasion to pass through it daily, the task of breaking a path became a formidable one, and the expense of having it broken would by no means be trifling. One of its two inhabitants, however, had an eye for business. In the Republican he inserted an advertisement offering his house for sale at a mere song. The plan worked like a charm. From immediately after breakfast until late at night, and on the next day also, a stream of hungry speculators of all sexes and nations, on foot and in sleighs and carriages, poured down the blockaded street to secure the great bargain. Of course they were all too late, as they were told, but long before the last had departed, the last snow drift had vanished, and the street was smooth and hard as a plank floor—and all for half a dollar!—Springfield Republican.

NOVEL CEREMONY AT A WEDDING. At a wedding at Holderness, in Yorkshire, England, recently, a curious ceremony was performed. As soon as the bride and bridegroom had left the house, and had the usual number of old shoes thrown after them, the young folks rushed forward each bearing a teakettle of boiling water, which they poured down the front door steps, that other marriages might soon follow, or, as one said, "flow on."

The Jackson (Mich.) Citizen says: We would call the attention of our friends to this fine instrument, which surpasses all others of the kind. There are many other imitations in the market, but none have been made to equal the AMERICAN ORGAN, manufactured by S. D. & H. W. Smith, Boston, Mass. We would congratulate the Messrs. Smith on the entire success that attend their efforts to produce a superior instrument. Almost all other makers have heretofore failed to produce an instrument which answers the object designed—a substitute for the pipe organ. The American Organ comes the nearest to the accomplishment of this end of any instrument we have ever seen or heard.

THE Thursday Spectator

—AND—
Boston Weekly Advertiser.

MESSRS. DUNBAR, WATERS & CO. have just issued the first number of a First Class Family Weekly, entitled THE THURSDAY SPECTATOR and BOSTON WEEKLY ADVERTISER. While taking the place of the present Weekly Advertiser, and employing in part of the matter of the Daily Advertiser, this will be an entirely distinct paper, having its own editor, who will carefully select its contents from the columns of the Daily, adding much original matter prepared expressly for the THURSDAY SPECTATOR. It will be printed in the Quarto Form, giving to its patrons EIGHT PAGES and FORTY-FOUR COLUMNS of reading matter every week. No effort will be spared to make the paper just what is wanted by the members of a New England household, with provisions for every need and every variety of taste.

The News of the Week will be presented in a careful and comprehensive summary, the more important matters being given in full, and care being taken to give in every Thursday's issue the LATEST NEWS.

New England Matters will receive especial attention, in a department by themselves with all notable items of intelligence arranged by States; while

Boston Incidents of general interest will be faithfully chronicled. In the department of Correspondence the conductors of the THURSDAY SPECTATOR confidently believe that their facilities cannot be excelled. With regular representatives at London, Paris, Florence and other points in Europe, a careful and trustworthy correspondent at Washington, and equally active agents and competent letter-writers at New York, Chicago, Portland, Augusta, Concord, N. H., Hartford, etc., they will also be represented by special reporters at any scene of temporary interest.

Editorial Articles will discuss all topics of current interest as they arise treating of social subjects as well as those of a political nature. The department of Literary and Art Notices will be made a speciality, and the criticisms of the paper will be candid, unbiased and out-spoken. Arrangements are in progress which will probably ensure the early beginning of a

Serial Story by an eminent English author, to appear only in the THURSDAY SPECTATOR simultaneously with its publication in England.

Short Sketches, both original and selected from the best foreign sources, will also be made a constant feature.

The Agricultural Department will be in charge of a special and well-qualified editor, and the paper will not only contain for the benefit of the farmer carefully prepared articles on agricultural topics, but a weekly report of the Cattle Market at Cambridge and Brighton, and such a Commercial Record of transactions in Boston as will furnish a complete and trustworthy source of information as to the prices of produce and the important staples of merchandise.

The THURSDAY SPECTATOR will be issued from the Daily Advertiser Building in Court street, and will be mailed to subscribers at

Two Dollars a Year. Twelve dollars paid in advance at the counting room will pay for a copy of the DAILY ADVERTISER and a copy of the THURSDAY SPECTATOR for one year.

D. B. Brooks & Brother have a fine lot of Diaries for 1868, No. 55 Washington street, Boston.

WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY. In the whole history of medical discoveries no balm has performed so many so remarkable cures of the numerous affections of the THROAT, LUNGS and CHEST, as this long tried and justly celebrated Balm. So generally acknowledged to be the superior of all other remedies that but few of the many who have tried its virtues by experience fail to keep it at hand as a speedy and certain cure for sudden attacks of Croup—falling believing that its remedial powers are comprehensive enough to embrace every form of disease, from the slightest cold to the most dangerous symptom of pulmonary complaint.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. From Rev. FRANCIS CORBELL, Pastor of the South Congregational Church, Bridgeport, Ct. "I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering humanity to bear testimony to the virtues of Dr. WISTAR'S Balm of Wild Cherry. I have used it—when I have had occasion for any remedy for Coughs, Colds or Sore Throat—many years, and never in a single instance has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very lame on Saturday, and on the following day, after using a liberal quantity of the Balm, my lameness has invariably been removed. And I have preached without difficulty. I commend it to my brethren in the ministry, and to public speakers generally, as a certain remedy for the bronchial troubles to which we are peculiarly exposed."

This may certify that I have used the Patent Elastic

contrivance to keep the feet dry and comfortable that I have ever used, and for any one having corns or ten-

CHAS. C. DARLING, Stationer.
From H. Williams, Esq., Treasurer of the Worcester Railroad.
Boston, Oct. 23, 1867.
Mr. Hill—I have used your Patent Elastic Ventilating Inner Soles through a portion of the past winter and summer, and find them to be the best contrivance to keep the feet warm and dry. Being troubled with tender feet I have continued to use with lighter boots through the past summer and found them to exceed my anticipations. Keeping the feet warmer and cooler in hot weather, and giving an agreeable elasticity in walking.
Very truly yours,
H. WILLIAMS.

Poetry.
POEM BY MRS. DR. BLAKE,
At the High School Re-Union, Town Hall,
Quincy, Wednesday Eve., Dec. 4, 1867.

Dear Friends, old and new:
With no joy in their hearts, and no love on their lips,
Who think love an illusion, and friendship a snare,
And the chief end of man to be sorrow and care,
Who look on existence with doubting and fears
As a pathway of grief through a valley of tears,
If such were but here—what a shock of surprise
They would catch in the welcome that gleams in your eyes.
For here we are gathered,—though "Hark! Hark!"
Where the streets are paved, and the gas-lights are lit,
To come poking along through December's cold air,
With thermometer sunk to—seven knows where—
The "ties" that around us their glances have cast
Are less of the present, and more of the past,
And the fair time that youth had mapped out on each brow
Are changing to crowfeet for some of us now.
Since we sat in the schoolroom, and played in the yard,
Called Algebra easy, and Latin words hard,
Since we learned Philosophy's edicts by heart,
In that blessed old temple of Science and Art—
How many a year in the distance has flown,
And left us its lessons to study alone—
To work out its problems of sunshine or strife,
And make up the warp and the woof of our life.

When we closed up our text books, and stood at the door,
The schoolroom behind us, the world before,
We thought we had come to the end of our task,
And the world would give us whatever we'd ask;
In the strength of our purpose, the might of our hearts,
We stood on the threshold, just ready to start,
We mapped out our future, thro' thick and thin,
And thought nothing remained but to sit and win.

But a trace of those memories—here we are now,
A just on each lip, and a smile on each brow,
Whether victor or vanquished we stand in the fight,
This is scarcely the place to proclaim it to-night;
Let us look to our ranks, and see what they contain,
The matter of strength, whether muscle or brain;
'Tis a good thing to know, when you're one of a crowd,
Just when to be humble, and when to be proud.

We've a very fair share of the good things of life,
Clear heads in the counsel, strong data in the strife;
We have Russell, the Doctor, if things should go ill,
To help out our weakness with potion and pill—
We have Lunt, the Attorney, whose legal mind
Can keep Madame Justice from going blind,
And as to our Merchants, those opulent swells,
There's no end to the size and the kind of their shells.

We have men in the fields of the West from our ranks,
We have clerks in the counting room, cashiers of banks,
We have some making way through most liberal ranks,
Some fighting with bolts and bolts in the ranks,
Some skilled in all handicrafts, taking their part
At the bench or the anvil, the shop or the mart,—
May the banner above them be ever unfurled,
For labor is honor—God's gift to the world!

In religion, alas for our wandering feet,
The very extremest of all extremes meet,
Some, humming psalms till the coming meeting rings,
Come Nig. singing, lying on Methodist wings—
While there, with glad haste, as if dressed for a feast,
Is Kelly, just donning the robes of a priest,
And between these two poles, in all loving regard,
Each one in his own fashion proves the Lord.

'Tis a small piece of news 'twill delight you to hear,
(I've been given my name to no State Constable's ear.)
Though we're most of us temperate people, what then,
We have our small failings like all other men,
We are temperate people, still nights such as these,
Even cold water men would prefer not to freeze,
So I might as well tell you, for murder will out,
We've some weak old Porter, unconscious stout.

We would speak of our ladies,—but I'm not to blame
If so many have foolishly changed their right name
To the spot where they lie, with calm eyes closed in sleep,
To sleep with life's tumult to wake or to weep;
They walked on beside us, till day after day,
Some sooner, some later, dropped smiling away,
And turning too soon from the pathway we trod,
Passed up through the grave to the presence of God.

And others—our heroes—went down to the South,
The war of Freedom in heart and in mouth;
They fought in the trench when the bullets rained fast;
Some fell on the field just as glory was nigh,
Some came back again to their heartbroken ties,
Some walk with us yet, and we own them with pride,
As of souls that have conquered, the true and the tried.
It was fitting—old town of the patriot dead,
That the patriot living should stand in their stead
When the Spirit of Liberty woke to the strife,
To crush back the traitors who menaced her life!
These too were your children,—these young hearts who GAVE
The best hopes of earth to the gloom of the grave,
Whose memories, long as our Country shall last,
The pride of our future, the light of our past!

So closes my record; I think to be fair
Of the good things of life we have more than our share
We have men to wish for, except one that grieves
As like to the old Irish as branches to trees;
What have we to wish for, except that each year
The same hearts and same faces may meet with us here,
And then, by and by, when earth's ties are all given,
The hope of eternal Re-union in Heaven.

CHRISTMAS FOR RICH AND POOR.

"A MERRY CHRISTMAS!" It echoed through the wide streets in a thousand different voices; it rang out in the clear sleigh-bells; it was shouted through the house by childish voices; it was whispered in loving tones by the invalid's
couch; it was sighed forth, with bitter emphasis, in the prison cells; it was muttered, in hard voices, in the dark, dirty
alleys, where merriment was a mockery,
or the despairing mirth of over-wrought
misery: "A Merry Christmas!"
"Anna!" said a low, feeble voice,
from a poor, hard pallet—"Anna!"
"Yes, mother; am here."
The child—she had not seen more than twelve or thirteen summers—rose
from a seat upon the floor, laid aside her sewing, and bent over the invalid.
The room was a garret, poorly protected from the cold, snowy winds without. A small fire hardly served to take the bitter chill from the air. The furniture consisted of two mattresses upon the floor, and a low wooden chest.

"Anna, dear child, put aside your work.
It's Christmas Day. Where is Charles?"
"Gone to the store. Mr. Perkins promised him a new jacket for a Christmas gift; and he has gone for the order."
"And you, my poor child, will have no gift."

"I am as fortunate as you," said Anna,
with assumed gaiety; but in spite of her efforts to restrain them, a large tear rolled down each cheek.
"Mother! dear mother!" and now
the tears flowed freely—"you are sick,
slivering with cold on Christmas day!
And I cannot warm you! Others have
fine gifts, large houses, warm fires,
and plenty to eat; while you are starving and freezing. It is unjust. O Heaven! hast
thou no pity for my mother?"

"Anna, it is just. Listen, my child, and you shall hear my story. Long years ago, I was the petted child of wealthy parents. I had brothers and sisters; but all I was the favorite.
"Mother! dear mother!" and now
the tears flowed freely—"you are sick,
slivering with cold on Christmas day!
And I cannot warm you! Others have
fine gifts, large houses, warm fires,
and plenty to eat; while you are starving and
freezing. It is unjust. O Heaven! hast
thou no pity for my mother?"

Among the visitors at my father's house,
there was a Frenchman, a man who called himself Count de la Posta. He was handsome and graceful. I loved him.
My father, who saw his real worth-lessness, tried, by gentleness and love, to win
him from him. This was impossible.
I fancied him a persecuted saint, and clung to him still more closely. At last, my father exacted from us a promise to separate, and hold no communication with each other for a year. He hoped that in that time he would convince me of his unworthiness. Anna, in six months I broke my promise, and eloped with Count de la Posta. I trusted to my father's great love for forgiveness. I was wrong.
My ingratitude, disobedience and deceit met their just punishment; my father refused to see his erring child; it was a bitter disappointment, I had so counted on his love; but I turned to my husband for comfort. Now came the hardest blow of all. My husband told me that his name was Dugarde, and that he had been valet to noblemen all his life. He had married me in hopes of sharing my dowry, and now quietly refused to support me. For ten years, we lived a life of utter unhappiness. In the meantime you and Charles were born. Had he but loved me, I could still have been happy. At last, he died. In all these long years, I had heard no word of love from his lips; but on his deathbed he spoke to me tenderly and gently. Anna, I have long forgiven him his unkindness; do you the same. After he died, I again sought my father. In vain; he refused to see me. For three years more I supported my children;
then came this sickness. Anna, my child,
I will soon cease to be a burden upon your young hands."

"Mother, do not speak so. You break
my heart."
"Anna, my dear child, who will care
for you when I am gone? God bless and pity my orphan children! It is Christmas day. This very day, fifteen years ago, I left my father's house. We were having a gay party, for Christmas day
is also my birthday; and I was on that evening seventeen years old. I left my home in a rich dress, glittering with jewels, and my hair decked with flowers;
and now I die in a garret, on a hard mattress, shivering with cold. Then there were soft furs to envelop my thinny clad
form, and cover my bare neck and arms;
now, rags cover me, and I perish with cold. Father in Heaven, my punishment is just, but it is bitter! Anna, what is after dark, mother. The fire-light is all that makes the room bright.
Ah, here comes Charles. And a lad, a year or two younger than Anna, came bounding into the room."

"Mother! Anna! a merry Christmas!
I have a new jacket and five dollars in money; but I have better news than that.
There was an old gentleman in Mr. Perkins' store; and when he heard my mother was sick, he told me to come to his house, and he would give me some fruit—fruit, dear mother, at Christmas!

and some wine and jelly. Anna, get your bonnet and the basket, and come. I know the house; he led me past it; it is not far from here."
"Shall I go, mother?" said Anna.
"Yes dear; but come back soon; I feel very weak and ill to-night; and I long for jelly or wine; it will give me new strength. Good-night, children."

They started on their errand. Anna, oppressed by the sad story her mother
had related, and filled with dark forebodings, could scarcely keep pace with her merry-hearted brother, who, filled with joy at his Christmas presents,
and longing to carry the promised dainties
to his mother, bounded along, unheeding the falling snow and the cold
wind, which blew open his poor jacket, and nipped his fingers and toes. His precious new jacket and the five dollars
had been left in his mother's hands.

There was to be a large party at the manor of Mr. Pomeroy. The family, children and all, were to assemble, to pass the Christmas evening. Now, reader,
we will step in before the other guests arrive. We find only two persons in the parlor; one an old gentleman, the other a lady between thirty and forty years of age, but still beautiful, with a sweet face,
and a low, sweet voice. The gentleman is pacing up and down the room, while the lady arranges some music upon the grand piano. Luxury can scarce devise a more superb apartment. These, the occupants of the room, are Mr. Pomeroy and his daughter Anna, who is the hostess of the expected company, for Mrs.
Pomeroy has laid in her quiet grave for ten years. Suddenly the gentleman paused in his walk, and spoke to his daughter:
"My dear, there was a child in a store
this morning, whose story interested me.
He has an invalid mother; and I promised him some wine and fruit for her. He will be here soon. Will you attend to these things? It is Christmas; and we must remember the poor."

The lady left the room; and the old gentleman resumed his walk. "Christmas!" he muttered. "Fifteen years!
O Hattie, my child! where are you this Christmas night?"

The large parlors were soon filled with guests. Music, dancing, and merriment came upon the broad, snow-covered step
in front of the house.
"Oh, Anna!" said Charles, "isn't it fine in there?" and he leaned over the railing to look in at the window. "Listen!
you can hear the music; don't they look pretty, dancing? Oh, Anna, see the little boys and girls! See, that little girl is just about as big as you; isn't she pretty, in her white dress, with gold rings on her sleeves? Don't she look like an angel? Oh, Anna! don't you wish you lived in a big house, and had white dresses,
and dancing, and music?"

"They are coming to the door, Charley," said Anna.
The children were led into the wide
hall, and stood over the furnace register,
warming their cold fingers, while the servant went to find Miss Pomeroy. Soon
they were surrounded by little children,
dressed in gay, pretty clothes, who elu-
sively, full of pity, around the children, who had no Christmas presents. Miss Pomeroy herself brought out the basket.
As she came near the group, she hastily
placed the basket upon the hall-table,
and came to Anna. "Child! child!"
she cried, while the tears poured down
her cheeks, "who are you?"

"My little namesake! my niece! O my child! my sister's little one!" "Father!"
The old gentleman came hastily at her call. "See!" she cried. "Is she not Harriet's image? Look, father! Oh, this is Christmas night! Once again, I wish you, forgive my sister!"
"Anna—the old man's voice trembled—
"is this not a forbidden subject?"

"But she is sick! poor! her children begging on Christmas night! Father, pity her—forgive her! Children, all your lives, please for your aunt—your little cousins! Nellie! Lola! oh, will you not all speak?"

A handsome man now came from the parlor and spoke to Charles.
"Your name, my man?"
"Charles Pomeroy Dugard."
"What! my name? Why?"
"It is Harriet's child, Charles," said
Anna Pomeroy. "Father! ah! you wept. Father, may we bring Harriet here?"

"Yes, go; take the carriage and bring her," said Mr. Pomeroy.
"She can't come," said Charles; "she's got no bonnet and shawl; she sold them
for medicine, ever so long ago."

In a carriage piled with soft furs
and cushions, Charles and Annie went for their sister, while their little namesakes were taken by Lola and dressed—Anna in a white dress, to Charles's great delight,
and the young man himself in a warm
suit of his cousin's.

Harriet lay on the hard mattress, watching for her children. The fire was low, almost out, the room bitter cold, and the invalid longing with intense desire, for the return of her children. The time passed slowly, the fire went out, and in the dark, cold room, went up a prayer for pity and petition for her children. She felt the cold creep through her limbs, and

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Eighteen Hundred Sixty-Seven has filled its rounds and we are now to welcome a new year. Again we speak our kindest wishes to our readers and patrons. As their sympathy and support have cheered us in the past, so do they incite to new efforts for the future. We have endeavored to redeem the pledges which we gave them at the opening of the year, and in whatever of success we have enjoyed, they have been sharers. In common with others in industrial pursuits we have not been unaffected by the general depression of business. Yet with thankfulness we may say that our progress in substantial prosperity is steady, and every week adds to the number of our subscribers and patrons. New demands we are aware will be made upon us in the coming year, and new outlays of strength, time and treasure. But with the co-operation hitherto enjoyed, we trust that we shall merit the confidence of our friends and the approbation of a discerning public.

It requires no prophet's eye to see that 1868 is to be a year of no ordinary interest. Events of momentous importance are transpiring in the world, and changes in public sentiment and National administration will increase the influence and enhance the value of the work of public journalists. Nor does the worth of a village sheet in a community like ours increase in less proportion year by year. Working in a humbler sphere than some of our contemporaries, we shall endeavor to present a faithful transcript of passing events in the midst of us and in the world at large. Our readers will join with us in the sentiments which the poet Laureate has so felicitously expressed as our hearty wishes for our common country and the world:

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring happy bells across the snow,
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true!
Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.
Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kinder hand;
Ring in the love of God and man,
Ring in the Christ that is to come!"

FIRE AT SQUANTUM. Two barns, one large—110 feet in length—60 tons of hay, and two valuable horses, the property of Mr. James Hucks, of Squantum, were destroyed by fire, last evening, about eight o'clock. Insured—we did not learn where—for six thousand dollars.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS. We have added quite a number of new subscribers to our list recently and would be pleased to enter on our books the names of any of our citizens who would feel a desire to enjoy and encourage their local paper.

CHRISTMAS. We had delightful weather, and judging from the happy, merry faces around us, plenty of Christmas cheer—especially for the young—to make the occasion one of joy, merry-making, and social congratulations.

The entertainment at the Town Hall, the leading feature in the day's attractions, for the benefit of soldiers' orphans, whose fathers fell in battle in our late fearful struggle, was largely attended, and every way creditable to the management. It was an occasion honorable to the memory of the dead, and the Christian virtues of those, whose sympathies prompted them to devise means to afford shelter and protection to these friendless orphans, thus thrown helpless upon the cold charities of the world. Peculiarly, also, we are happy to learn that it was a decided success; that two hundred dollars, over and above all expenses, was realized, which will help swell the resources of this benevolent enterprise.

At the merry Christmas gathering at the Town Hall, on Christmas Eve, the poor were not forgotten. We learn that Mr. Henry H. Faxon presented the charitable Society with an additional fifty dollars. This gentleman appears not only to take pleasure in making money, but as freely bestowing it, wherever an object worthy presents itself.

ACCIDENT. Washington M. French, Esq., Deputy Sheriff, lost a valuable dog on Saturday last. The dog was standing on the track, apparently in a meditative mood, as an outward express train approached, and was called, but would not heed the warning, and was run over, literally torn to pieces. It is supposed from this, by some, that it was a case of premeditated suicide—but as no cause is assigned for such an act, that idea is abandoned.

SILVER WEDDING. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. A. Burnham, was very pleasantly and appropriately celebrated at their residence in Stoughton on the 30th ult. About seventy-five persons—including quite a number from this town—had the pleasure of joining in the festivities of the occasion. After the usual congratulations, and at an opportune moment, a beautiful chamber set and chamber carpet were presented to them by their daughters and friends from Vermont; next was a gift from their friends in Sandwich of a splendid set of engraved glass ware; then their Quincy friends had the pleasure of presenting their mementoes, which consisted of a set of silver teaspoons, tablespoons, sugar and salt spoons. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present, and a hope lingered in their breasts that they might all be present at the golden wedding.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BOSTON, DEC. 26, 1867.

Christmas.—The State Legislature, Candidates for President of the Senate and Speaker of the House—Important Items on Claims for Soldiers' Bounties.

Christmas passed off in a very pleasant and lively manner in Boston. Care was thrown to the breeze and the community made it emphatically a holiday—one of conviviality with good order prevailing throughout the metropolis, so far as is known.

On the first day of January next, the State Legislature assembles in the big house on Beacon street. Some curiosity is felt as to the result of the organization of the two Houses. Gen. Wm. Schouler, of Lynn, seems to have the inside track for President of the Senate. He would undoubtedly make an able presiding officer of that dignified body. For Speaker of the House several candidates are named—Hon. Charles R. Train, Harvey Jewell, John Q. Adams and others. Mr. Adams will bring with him to the House of Representatives, this winter, a high reputation; the candidate of a great reputation for Governor in November last, receiving 70,000 votes. The future certainly looks brilliant for him. Leaving the classic shades of college as a good scholar in 1853, and pursuing the study of the law, he has developed a high order of talents, and commands a wonderful prominence with the American people; hardly reaching the standard of manhood—thirty-five years of age. Mr. Adams would make a good Speaker of the House, or if elected as presiding officer of the House will be found well looked up in parliamentary rules. Harvey Jewell, Esq., of this city, is prominently named as a candidate for Speaker. He is in common parlance of the term, a smart man. The House and Senate will bring more than an ordinary array of practical talents for legislation.

Matters are very quiet at Washington during the holidays of Congress. Two items are worthy of notice for many readers of your paper, relative to Soldiers' Bounties. The House Special Committee at Washington having looked into the delay in the payment of bounties have made a report, showing that the total number of claims under the act of 1865, filed up to December 1, 1867, was 412,000, of these 275,000 remain unsettled; held back it is attributed by lack of clerical force. The Committee recommend the passage of a Bill authorizing employment of additional and sufficient force to insure speedy settlement of these long delayed claims, and also a law authorizing the use of duplicate checks upon evidence of loss of the original. Touching the subject of bounties still further—a law in Boston carried a case to the Court of Claims which the Treasury Department had refused to allow. The decision of the Court is to the effect that soldiers who enlisted before July 22, 1861, are entitled to bounty, whether discharged for disease or honorable cause. This will effect the rights of hundreds of men, whose bounties were not allowed because they had not served two years.

PARISH MATTERS. The Congregational Church and Society, of this town, have extended a unanimous call to Rev. J. E. Hall, of Grafton, to become their Pastor.

This Society has also secured the services of Mr. and Mrs. Brown in the choir for one year. Mr. Brown is the new teacher of the Coddington Grammar School.

MASONIC. The following were installed as officers of RURAL LODGE, for the ensuing year, on the 19th instant:

Levi Stearns, W. M.
Stephen S. Bradford, S. W.
George L. Gill, J. W.
Seth Dewing, Jr., Secretary.
Ensign S. Fellows, Treasurer.
Charles H. Porter, S. B.
Nathan A. Brickett, J. B.
E. W. Underwood, S. S.
William W. Smith, J. S.
Edward A. Spear, Marshal.
George Veazie, 2d, Tyler.
Rev. S. T. Aldrich, Chaplain.

COST $1, WORTH $100, as some persons wearing the Patent Elastic Ventilating Inner Soles have acknowledged a pair to be, for curing warts feet.

Now spurious twenty-five cent notes are in circulation. They are the best executed of any of that denomination yet made, and are well calculated to deceive even experts. It may be detected by the paper being a trifle thicker than the genuine, and the green on the back a trifle lighter. The vignette of Mr. Fessenden is at the first glance fully as clear as the genuine, but upon close scrutiny shows that it is of wood and not of a steel engraving.

THE DARTMOUTH. The current number closes the first volume, and a valuable one it is. No graduate or friend of Dartmouth college can afford to be without this readable and excellent monthly—$2.00 a year.

SINGULAR VISITATION. Fourteen girls out of two hundred employed by one firm of dry goods dealers in Boston were recently taken sick with small pox, all in one day. They were all employed in one department and have been very sick. It is supposed the contagion was contained in some recently imported goods.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT. A lady of this village went out to spend the day recently, taking with her an infant child, which showed great uneasiness through the day, crying nearly all the time, without apparent cause. Upon undressing the child at night, it was found that one of its toes was bent entirely back, broken and turned black.—Weymouth Gazette.

The Patent Elastic Ventilating Inner Soles cure cold and sweaty feet.

FOR THE PATRIOT.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

As the time is fast approaching for the organization of the General Court, there seems to be an unusually large number of candidates in the field for the position of Sergeant-at-Arms. Those of our soldiers who served under Colonel (now Brigadier General) Ansell D. Wass, in the 19th, 60th and 62d Regiments, will be pleased to learn that their old friend and fellow-soldier is a prominent candidate for the position.

General Wass left his business in Boston on the first call of President Lincoln for volunteers, in April, 1861, and marched through Baltimore with the old 6th Regiment as First Lieutenant of the Washington Light Guard of Boston. He was subsequently promoted Captain in the 19th; Lieutenant Colonel of the 41st; Colonel of the 19th, 60th and 62d Regiments, and was interested in the end of the rebellion, after having been brevetted Brigadier General of Volunteers for gallant and meritorious conduct during the war.

General Wass was wounded at the battles of Glendale, Yorktown and Gettysburg. An extract from a letter from the late Governor Andrew to the Secretary of War will show what value that gentleman placed upon the services of the General. It reads as follows:

"My appreciation of the merits of Col. Wass as a military officer is attested by the various commissions which he has held by my appointment, in all of which positions he has conducted himself in a manner to command my entire approbation. Col. Wass is thoroughly versed in military tactics; he has a high reputation as a disciplinarian, as being cool in command, and brave in action, and is eminently a gentleman."

[BY REQUEST.]

Extract from a speech of Andrew Johnson, at Nashville, June 9, 1864:

The question is whether man is capable of self-government. I hold with Jefferson that government was made for the convenience of man, and not man for government. The laws and constitutions were designed as instruments to promote his welfare. And hence from this principle I conclude that governments can and ought to be changed and amended to conform to the wants, to the requirements, and progress of the people, and the enlightened spirit of the age. [Loud applause.] Now, if any of you Secessionists have lost faith in man's capacity for self-government, and feel unfit for the exercise of this great right, go straight to rebellion, take Jeff Davis, Beauregard, and Bragg for your masters, and put their collars on your necks.

And let me say that now is the time to secure these fundamental principles, while the land is rent with anarchy and upheavals with the throes of a mighty revolution. While society is in this disordered state and we are seeking security, let us fix the foundations of the Government on principles of eternal justice which shall endure for all time.

But in calling a convention to restore the State, who shall restore and re-establish it? Shall the man who gave his influence and his means to destroy the Government? Shall he who brought this misery upon the State be permitted to control its destinies? If this be so, then all this precious blood of our brave soldiers and officers so freely poured out will have been wantonly spilled. All the victories won by our noble armies will go for naught, and all the battle-fields which have been sown with dead heroes during the rebellion will have been made memorable in vain.

Why all this carnage and devastation? It was that treason might be put down and traitors punished. Therefore I say that traitors should take a back seat to the work of restoration. If there be but five thousand men in Tennessee loyal to the Constitution, loyal to freedom, loyal to justice, these true and faithful men should control the work of reorganization and reformation absolutely. [Loud and prolonged applause.] I say that the traitor has ceased to be a citizen, and in joining the rebellion has become a public enemy. He forfeited his right to vote with loyal men when he renounced his citizenship and sought to destroy our Government.

Treason must be made odious and traitors must be punished and impoverished. Their great plantations must be seized and divided into small farms, and sold to honest, industrious men. The day for protecting the lands and negroes of these authors of rebellion is past. It is high time it was. I have been most deeply pained at some things which have come under my observation. We get men in command who, under the influence of flattery, fawning and caressing, grant protection to the rich traitor, while the poor Union man stands out in the cold, often unable to get a receipt or a voucher for his losses. [Cries of "That's so!"]
